Mr. Shapiro's Dread In India and in Iowa Shall the Idle Hibernate? Canada, Gold Mountain

—By Arthur Brisbane—

SHOOTING OF gangsters by gangsters continues, and would make an interesting added chapter for Kropotkin's "Mutual Aid As a Factor In Evolution."

Mutual destruction thins the gangster ranks, but the empty places are soon filled.

Benjamin Meyerson of the Shapiro gang boasted that he was "the best dressed racketeer in Brownsville." His next costume, not fashionable, will be supplied by an undertaker.

Joseph Grottali, another gangster, was killed near the spot on which Meyerson was placed. Both ex-convicts had been released or let out on bail after crimes that should have made it impossible for them to do any harm for 20 years at least.

The chief of their gang, Shapiro, recently killed, had peculiarities. He was not afraid of bullets, and proved it. "But he would run, sobbing, if anybody pulled a knife on him."

Our imagination and antecedents rule us. Our ancestors have seen knives and their work for so many hundred of generations that we all dread them. Bullets are new and we hardly believe in them.

India's natives, under British law, must submit to modern methods of fighting the plague. They do not like this and fight against it, insisting on their right to swim in the "Holy Ganges" river, although corpses of those dead of the plague may be floating upon it.

Iowa's State law compels testing cattle to make sure that they are not tubercular, a good idea, since children get consumption from the milk of tubercular cows. But it seems a bad idea to some Iowa farmers and it has been necessary to call out the militia to protect those that have been sent out to test the cattle.

Discovery of insulin, marvelous remedy for diabetes, becomes more important and marvelous in view of recent scientific suggestions.

A learned Briton says that insulin enables the unemployed to hibernate as the groundhog, bear and other animals do in winter, curling up, taking in barely enough oxygen to keep the heart going and eating nothing. Interesting solution of the unemployment and dole problem, perhaps.

But the thought of five or six million workers and their families curled up in the dark, all winter, is unpleasant.

England withdraws temporarily from the gold standard and Canada, her stalwart son, announces a Canadian dollar backed with gold, the same as the United States dollar. You wonder how soon England's children, Canada and others, may be taking care of their ancient mother?

Not very soon, probably, for the power of intellect is in Britain, the most important of all wealth, and indestructible.

No doubt of Canada's ability to carry out her gold standard program.

Humboldt, quoted by Stuart Chase in his excellent new book on Mexico, described Mexico as a mountain of gold with a beggar astride of it.

That description is not accurate now, with Mexico building up industry and developing their resources.

Canada in potential wealth is indeed "a mountain of gold," and timber in control of the modern men, and, in proportion to their transactions, our best customers.

The stock market stands extremely well the "gold news" from England. Important stocks yesterday were higher in price than before the news came. This is due in part to the Stock Exchange having wisely put a ban on "short selling," that is to say, on speculators selling stocks that they do not own, in the effort to lower prices.

Since the Stock Exchange discouragement of speculators on the short side, which is the side of pessimism, has done so much good, why not continue it?

Every man in Wall Street knows that short selling go rumors harmful to business, innumerable conspiracies against real values.

People of moderate means, who believe the bottom has been reached, and decide to buy stocks representing valuable properties, will, if wise, refrain from buying on margin.

In this day of uncertainty, the ALL CASH plan means safety.

One important question is, "WHAT EFFECT WILL BRITAIN'S ACTION HAVE ON SILVER AND ITS VALUE?"

When an empire that reaches around the world says, "I can get along without gold if I

NEW RE-ENACTMENT OF COLLINGS CRIME

WIDOW TO FACE 3RD ORDEAL

Counsel Willing She Appears at Inquest; a Lunatic Is Hunted as Slayer

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, Sept. 23—Solution of the mystery of Benjamin Collings' murder will be sought in a new re-enactment of the crime by his young widow, who says two pirates killed him.

It will take place on Friday either before or after Mrs. Collings has publicly testified at Huntington at the inquest. It will be the third reenactment staged for authorities by the former Lillian Chelius of Boston.

Announcement that she would again reenact the murder scene on the yacht, Penguin, and that she would testify at the inquest were made by her chief counsel, Homer S. Cummings.

MYSTERY DEEPENS

Coming on the heels of Dist. Atty. Alexander Blue's announced "right about face" acceptance of Mrs. Collings' story as the absolute truth, it turned the eerie mystery back into an old channel of conjecture.

Dist. Atty. Blue was silent regarding the new re-enactment to which his chief investigator, Detective Felix Di Martini, will for the first time be a witness.

He said only that an extensive search for a madman, whose identity was known, was being made. The man sought, he said, was recently paroled from a New York institution and is missing from his usual haunts.

Other developments in the murder of the Stamford (Ct.) engineer were these:

1—Three known youths were also sought in the belief that one may have been the maniac's accomplice in piracy, murder and abduction.

BIGELOW PUT 'WIFE HOAX' OVER '400'

Introduced Mary McDevitt as Bride at a Dinner Given Them by Mrs. Niles

Mrs. Nathaniel Niles of Brookline, society woman and wife of the former famous tennis star, declared today that Stephen Sohier Bigelow, wealthy clubman, "hoaxed" her, her husband and their friends by introducing Mary McDevitt of Brighton to them as his wife.

Miss McDevitt, daughter of Deputy Sheriff William A. McDevitt, has been missing since last Thursday when she disappeared from the Hotel Somerset, after announcing publicly that she had wedded Bigelow.

Bigelow, whose denials were augmented by those of his mother and brother, is said to have told the girl's father has failed in all efforts to find him or the girl.

"WIFE" DESCRIBES ROMANCE

At her fashionable residence in Middlesex rd., Brookline, Mrs. Niles told a Boston Evening American reporter that she and her husband were introduced to "Mrs. Bigelow" at the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

The result was a dinner party at the Niles home two weeks ago. The petite, attractive blonde made a decided "hit" and entertained the gathering with a brief account of her romantic wedding "in Paris."

In her announcement last week the locale of the marriage was given by the girl as Greenwich, Ct.

A mutual friend "spilled the beans" a short time later, calling the marriage story a bit of fiction, and subsequent developments convinced Mrs. Niles it was a hoax, she said.

"The sort of joke you would expect of a college boy, but not of a man 40 years old," she remarked, "I don't care if I never see Mr. Bigelow again."

Mrs. Niles said she and her husband had not seen Bigelow for about three years when he tele-

Curley Home at Nantasket Is Saved

Fire which destroyed the summer home of W. B. Cohen in Manomet ave., Nantasket, today, endangered the summer home of Mayor James M. Curley, whose place is directly in back of that which burned. A water screen prevented spread of the flames.

The loss of the Cohen cottage was $7000. It was unoccupied.

THREATS 'JUST JOKE' TO DEB

Worcester, Sept. 23—A letter-writing terrorist who threatens kidnaping of debutante daughters in four Worcester families, but who is "just a joke" to Joan Kingsley, eldest of them all, was sought by police, county and postal authorities today.

Although police claim that threatening letters have been sent only to the Kinsley family demanding sums from $1000 to $5000, it was learned from other sources that such letters have been sent to four socially prominent families.

Miss Joan Kinsley, 19, a debutante of last fall and daughter of Edward W. Kinsley, wealthy banker, was threatened with kidnaping for ransom three weeks ago, but although police became concerned about the threat, Joan refused a police bodyguard and refused to let her goings and comings restricted.

A dummy package was left at the spot, and while police, concealed in bushes, watched hopefully, the night wore on. No one came for the dummy package, however, and the vigil was in vain.

Since then several other letters have been received by the Kinsley family at their home, 15 Cedar st, all making threats against Joan.

Lindys End Third Flood Survey Hop

Nanking, China, Sept. 23 (AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh returned here today after making their third flood relief aerial survey for the Chinese government. The Lindberghs surveyed the area around Wuhu up the Yangtze river from here.

They reported the conditions were as bad as they found along the grand canal in North Kiangsu province.

Geese Wing South; Early Winter Seen

A wedge of approximately 200 geese were observed flying high, wide and handsome over Weymouth at daybreak today, the first day of autumn. They were headed south, harbinger of an early winter.

And that is a good introduction for the weather forecast for Boston, which is, "Fair and cooler tonight and tomorrow, with moderate northwest winds."

REAL BEER IS ASKED BY LEGION

Employment Committee Reports Hundreds of Thousands Will Be Given Jobs

BULLETIN

Detroit, Sept. 23 (AP)—The American Legion voted today to hold its 1932 national convention in Portland, Ore.

Detroit, Sept. 23 (INS)—Modification of the Volstead act to legalize the sale and manufacture of real beer, within the limitations of the constitution, was proposed to the American Legion's convention today by its national employment commission.

The commission declared legalized beer would put hundreds of thousands of unemployed back to work. The recommendation was laid before the convention by Howard M. Savage, former national commander and the committee's chairman.

BONUS ISSUE IN AIR

The Legion's Legislative Committee failed to reach an agreement on the cash bonus issue at its first session today. It is understood that when the ultimate report is made it will advise against cash payments at this time.

JUSTICE FOR WORKERS

George Berry, president of the Pressman's Union, speaking for the American Federation of Labor, declared the Legion faced its "greatest job in securing justice for America's millions of unemployed." He declared the government should take command of relief.

The convention then paid tribute to the memory of Peter J. Brady of New York, who was killed in an airplane accident enroute to Detroit.

While an impromptu parade of legionnaires stormed the doors of Convention Hall demanding beer, the Hoover administration threw Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans ad-

Boston labor leaders announce they will lead fight on wage cuts.

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—Deeply disappointed over the swing toward lower wages, the federal government devoted anxious attention today to protecting the American standard of living.

The great concern of the President, it was disclosed at the White House, was that everything now be done to see that the more slender pay check should NOT mean a permanent impairment of the standard of comfort and security which has been reared for the American worker.

To some high official quarters there was a disposition to feel that the steel and automotive industries had taken the lead toward a retrenchment policy just at the time when a recovery from depression was in sight.

HUGE PROFIT IN STOCKS SHOWN

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Eastern Bankers' Corp. did an extensive business in selling stock of affiliated concerns during the first six months of 1928, according to testimony today at the mail fraud trial of three officers of the concern and associated companies.

The defendants are Howard H. Gunder, chairman of the board of the Eastern Bankers, and the Bankers' Capital Corp., the parent firm; Everett J. Sturges, former banking commissioner of Connecticut and president of the Eastern Bankers' Corp., and Roland J. Randall, president of the Bankers' Capital Corp.

Nathan N. Muzzy, former treasurer of Eastern Bankers' Corp., testified the corporation, which was represented to prospective stockholders as an investment trust, the major holdings of which were high grade bank and insurance stocks, received a total gross income for the six months period ended June 30, 1928, of $239,741 while its net profit from the sale of stock of affiliated concerns was $116,286, or nearly 50 per cent of the total.

MEXICANS HANG 85 LYNCHERS

Mexico City, Sept. 23 (INS)—The wholesale hanging of 85 residents of the town of Villa Guerreros in the State of Tabasco, by a punitive military expedition dispatched by Gov. Thomas Garrido was revealed in messages received here today.

The 85 were put to death because they had lynched Lieut. Luis Chables, mayor of the town, following the death of a young girl he was alleged to have attacked and kidnaped.

The girl fell off a horse on which she was being taken to a mountain hideaway and sustained injuries that caused her death.

The townspeople formed posses and captured Chables, hanging him to a tree after a summary trial.

Then Governor Garrido despatched mountain riflemen to the town, with instructions to punish those responsible for the hanging and enforce respect for the constituted authorities.

STOCKS RISE $3 TO $15 A SHARE

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Active buying of railroad issues sent the stock market scampering upward today in a rally that lifted principal issues $3 to more than $15.

With the ban on short selling lifted just before the opening and the London market cheerful after a two-day holiday, New York prices were buoyant in the early trading, and after a brief pause for profit-taking resumed the advance in more lively fashion.

Wall Street heard much gossip concerning possible early relief for the railroads, either through higher freight rates or a wage reduction following the cuts just announced by the steel and some other industries.

Active short covering swept over the group of rail shares, boosting Delaware & Hudson $15.50, and Union Pacific $12.50. Lackawanna climbed more than $7; Atchison over $9, and Norfolk & Western $10.

Industrials and utilities followed the rise with advances of $2 to $6. United States Steel common pushed up more than $3, while for American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can, the appreciation amounted to between $3 and $5. American Tobacco "B" soared $6.

Buoyant tendencies in the bond market gave also Wall Street cause for rejoicing.

BAY STATE LABOR FIGHTS PAY CUT, SAYS MORIARTY

STEEL SLASH IS DEPLORED AS 'BLUNDER'

Central Labor Union Head Calls It Move to Lower Standard of Living

Declaring that the slash in wages announced by officials of steel corporations is a direct assault to lower the standard of living, labor leaders in Massachusetts say they stand ready to fight to the last ditch.

J. Arthur Moriarty, president of the Boston Central Labor Union, in a statement given the Boston Evening American, deplored the lack of action by President Hoover to remedy the present economic situation and said that the adoption of William Randolph Hearst's proposition for a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan for public improvements would greatly help in bringing relief.

LABOR WILL FIGHT

Moriarty's statement follows:

"The 10 per cent slash in wages by five large industrial corporations is an economic blunder. It means the aggravation of an already dangerous situation and may lead to the greatest economic disturbance and political upheaval this country will have ever witnessed.

"It is a repudiation of a pledge given to the President of the United States at a conference called by him of labor and capital some time ago, not to reduce wages. Labor has kept its pledge by keeping industrial peace. It is a direct assault to lower the standard of living, and labor stands ready to fight this assault to the last ditch.

"In my opinion, the President of the United States, through lack of leadership, courage and confidence, can be blamed to a great extent for this situation. He has been urged by labor to call another conference of labor and capital, with labor presenting a concrete plan to remedy the situation.

JOBLESS IGNORED

"He has also been urged to call a special session of Congress, but evidently all to deaf ears. Special sessions of Congress can be called for war, can be called for flood sufferers, he called for farm relief, but evidently the plight of nearly 7,000,000 workers now walking the streets in search of work and unable to find it, with their families and dependents in dire want of food and clothing, is not taken seriously by the head of the government.

"There is no question the bankers have engineered this economic monstrosity, and the chaos and disturbance that may follow unless quick action is taken by the government, is their responsibility, not labor's.

"Even the splendid proposition of Mr. Hearst for a $5,000,000,000 loan for public improvements is not to be considered by the President. Mr. Hearst's proposition, if followed, would be a great help in this situation."

FROM STATE OFFICIALS

The following statement was issued by James T. Moriarty, president, and Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer, of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor:

"It is a spectacle of two of America's greatest corporations reducing the wages of workers who at best are endeavoring to eke out a miserable existence in a splendid example of modern capitalism at work.

"Facing the most devastating winter in America's peace-time history, United States Steel and other huge corporations are merely aggravating an already terrible situation, and at this particular time their action will be taken as the signal for a renewed onslaught on the wages of workers by employers in all industries.

"United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. have surrendered to the mandate of financiers who for some time have been exploiting a financial crisis of their own creation, and are demanding as the price for financial assistance that employers make drastic wage cuts; but the real purpose behind the bankers' demand for wage reductions is the achievement of political and economic ends that they have long been pursuing.

"In the light of economic facts it is amazing to observe the actions of those who are further impairing the purchasing power of the limited number of workers now employed by reducing wages. They are taking advantage of human distress and human suffering to force those wage cuts on the workers despite their protest.

"Hence the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor reaffirms its original position in opposition to the mad policy of those who are hastening the downfall of our existing order by reducing wages.

"(Signed)

"James T. Moriarty, president.
"Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer."

"GRAVE EMERGENCY"

Hines warned the convention against asking for full payment of the bonus at a time when the government's budget is unbalanced by more than a billion dollars. He declared the government was confronted by a "grave emergency" and that the legion would respond just as patriotically as it had in 1917.

Hines said he did not believe the government had been "too generous" with the veterans in the past, but that economic conditions now required the legion to act with caution.

CHEERED BY VETERANS

The declaration in favor of legalized beer was given a tumultuous reception by the veterans. Savage made this suggestion in behalf of the committee after filing its formal report on unemployment relief, solely to relieve unemployment.

The national rehabilitation committee asks that the convention give due consideration to modification of the Volstead Act by legalizing beer without conflict of the Constitution of the U. S. in the interest of furnishing adequate employment," said the former commander. "Your commission believes hundreds of thousands of jobs will be created by such a revision."

The commission in its informal report recommended that the Legion's 10,000 local posts devote their activities to finding jobs and to keeping the unemployed from suffering.

It also endorsed a holiday on immigration and a campaign to spur federal, state and municipal governments into initiating new public work programs.

COLLINGS KIN IN COLLAPSE

Herman P. Chelius, father of Mrs. Benjamin P. Collings, was near collapse today at his home on Moultrie st., Dorchester, as a result of his son-in-law's murder by pirates on Long Island sound 13 days ago, and events that have followed the unsolved slaying.

The 76-year-old musician has been ordered to take a complete rest, during which he is being cared for by his three sisters, Miss Anna Chelius, one of the sisters, said that her brother had expressed a desire to go to Stamford, Ct., where his daughter also borders on the verge of collapse. The trip, however, was declared to be too arduous.

Miss Chelius said that her brother had complete faith in the story told by Mrs. Collings and his embittered against Dixcie Attorney Blue for methods he used in conducting his investigations in Connecticut.

She also denied reports that Mrs. Collings had been left penniless by the murder of her husband. She said that both Mrs. Collings and her five-year-old daughter were amply provided for.

LONDON STOCKS SLUMP, RISE ON GOLD RULING

Industrials Feature in Mild Selling at New York Hotel

London, Sept. 23 (AP)—The stock market, after adjustment of prices to coincide with the higher bank rate, closed steady.

Business was fair with industrials the feature especially iron and steels on prospective benefits from the suspension of the gold standard.

Gilt edge securities gained 1 per cent after the opening.

There was no rush to sell any issue. The whole atmosphere was cheerful, though government securities were off 2½ to 3 points.

One of the first quotations was made on the war loan at 94 which was quite nominal and compared with 97½ Saturday. It was pointed out that the sinking fund operates when this security reaches 90.

Adjusting quotations for gilt-edge stocks in accordance with the bank rate continued. Consols 2½ per cent were quoted two and a half points lower at 53½.

FUNDING LOAN DROPS

The funding loan 5s points lower at 83½; the consolidated loan of 4 per cent three points lower at 82 and the conversion loan of 5 per cent three points lower at 99.

All these quotations were largely nominal.

Industrials and gold mining shares, which started well, were easier under profit-taking, and transatlantic favorites were slightly lower. Brazil tractions were 10½; nickels 10¾, radios 17, and steels 90 to 91.

SELLING PRESSURE EASED.

Quotations generally were very wide. There was a number of small buying orders but no big selling pressure.

Foreign exchange market rates again were largely nominal. They varied little from yesterday's figures. Sterling in terms of foreign currencies was quoted as follows: In New York cable transfers $4.12 to $4.17, Paris 104 to 105, France, Amsterdam 10 to 11 guilders and Berlin 18 to 19 marks.

British Action Seen as Business Stimulant

London, Sept. 23—The effects of the suspension of the gold standard on England herself should be wholly good.

Psychologically, it will give her just the jerk that she needs for a fresh start, and psychology is everything in trade.

Practically, it undoes the handicap that Britain imposed on herself when she went back to the gold standard six years ago.

England's world position is chiefly due to her relative honesty and trustworthiness as compared with most of her neighbors. This prestige would have suffered in heavy blow if England had rewarded those who left money with her by reducing the pound as France devalued the franc.

Money Is Driving British Back Home

Paris, Sept. 23 (AP)—Many British visitors to Paris, Biarritz and the Riviera, receiving 20 francs less for their pounds, are returning home.

The trains to London are crowded and airplanes have large waiting lists.

London, Sept. 23 (INS)—British ports were jammed with ships today as foreign importers, fearing a British tariff, sought to dump large quantities of manufactured goods in this country.

Rise in Price of Silver Acclaimed in Mexico

Mexico City, Sept. 23 (AP)—Recovery in the quotation of bar silver as a result of Great Britain's suspension of the gold standard brought considerable satisfaction today to Mexico, largest silver-producing country in the world.

A general movement in the United States to lower costs of production to offset England's advantage in the foreign market is expected by Mexican observers to be forthcoming immediately.

Big Independent Firm to Cut Wages

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (INS)—The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, largest independent producer in the Pittsburgh district, today announced that on Oct. 1 wages of all its employes would be reduced by approximately 10 per cent.

The proposed wage cut, in line with those announced by the United States Steel Corporation and other large companies, will affect 20,000 employes of the company.

5300 WORKERS HERE HIT BY STEEL CUT

More than 5300 workers of Greater Boston are affected by the wage cuts of 10 per cent, announced by the Bethlehem Steel Company to take effect October 1.

There are three Bethlehem Steel plants here—the Fore River shipbuilding plant in Quincy, with a present force of more than 4800; the Simpson Dry Dock in East Boston, with approximately 200, and the Atlantic Works in East Boston, 300.

These figures do not include salaried workers.

Boston officials have not received any official notice of the reductions, but the announcement made by President Eugene C. Grace indicated that all wage-earners in the company's employ would be affected.

Business Leaders Doubt Value of Wage Cuts

New York, Sept. 23—Announcement of impending wage cuts in steel, motor, rubber and copper industries was subject today to a variety of interpretations.

Organized labor proclaimed its resistance. Some financial writers attributed to unnamed business leaders the belief that the step would hasten a revival of business.

Formal statements of corporations concerned merely stressed unsatisfactory present conditions or a new standard of value.

United States Steel took the initiative and announced a 10 per cent cut, affecting 220,000 employes, October 1. Bethlehem Steel followed suit. It will reduce wages 10 per cent, October 1, for 50,000 employes. Youngstown Sheet & Tube ordered a corresponding cut.

THOUSANDS ARE CUT.

The General Motors Corporation announced a 10 to 20 per cent reduction for 25,000 salaried employes, Bonus 150,000 employed on an hour-the time had come when the wage earners and small salaried people would begin to spend. With an inevitable favorable effect on trade.

This official further outlined his views as follows:

The country has been in this depression about two years now. At first the trend was steadily downward.

About the first of the year this stopped, and since then things have been bumping along on the bottom, up and down, but holding a fairly steady level.

After the next point in August, a natural seasonal condition, there was every reason to believe the curve would take a steady upward trend.

Of course, in all past depressions, retrenchment had been immediate. In 1921 a great majority of Congress did their wage-cutting in the first few months.

SHOULD MAINTAIN WAGES.

Staying, after all, is the crux of the entire situation.

No official would comment for quotation, although it was indicated the labor department would have something to say later.

At the President's retreat headquarters, where Walter S. Gifford is in charge, it was recalled that Mr. Hoover's last public utterance on wages was made in April in an address to the annual Associated Press luncheon. He said then:

"Although the present scale of wages would be equivalent to a large increase if commodity prices and the cost of living should stay down, we ought, I believe to make every effort to maintain the wage scale."

Since then Mr. Hoover had kept a close watch on developments which might point to a move for reduction, but White House officials would not disclose whether he was forewarned of yesterday's step in the steel and automotive industries.

Steel Workers to Protest Wage Cut

Youngstown, Ohio, Sept. 23 (AP)—A mass meeting of steel workers is scheduled to be held in Pittsburgh next Sunday to protest the wage cut announced by U. S. Steel Corporation, a representative of the International Labor Defense League, a Communist organization, announced after a meeting here last night.

The speaker would not state the time or place. He said steel workers from Youngstown would participate.

Marion Davies Is Welcomed Home

Los Angeles, Sept. 23—After a summer spent in Europe, Marion Davies, noted motion picture star, has returned to Los Angeles, to be greeted by a group of friends as glad to see her home as she was to be here.

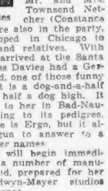
Marion Davies

She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulhall, Leonore Bushman and Eddie Kane, members of the same party that left here last May. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Netcher (Constance Talmadge) were also in the party, but they stopped in Chicago to visit friends and relatives. With her when she arrived at the Santa Fe station, Miss Davies had a German dachshund, one of those funny little dogs that is a dog-and-a-half long, but only half a dog high. It was presented to her in Bad-Nauheim. According to its pedigree, the dog's name is Ergo, but it already has begun to answer to a number of other names.

Miss Davies will begin immediately to read a number of manuscripts, she said, prepared for her at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios during her absence.

Margaret Mayo Wins Suit on Patent Granted in 1697

New York, Sept. 23—Patent letters granted in 1697 have won a suit for Miss Margaret Mayo, playwright and actress, against the New York Central Railroad.



Margaret Mayo

Miss Mayo was awarded 5400 square feet of land along the Hudson river in a series of actions in one of which she was allowed six cents. When filing suit, she claimed certain lands belonging to her estate had been appropriated by Carrie, Henry and Henry Sherwood, and by the railroad.

Miss Mayo, who was one of five to form the Golden Bough Picture Co., wrote "Polly of the Circus" and "Twin Beds." She headed the war-time entertainment group known as "Somewhere in France."

German "Greta Garbo" Returns to U. S. Stage

New York, Sept. 23—Lady Christians, known as the "Greta Garbo" of her native Germany, has returned to New York after an absence of 13 years.

Mady Christians

Although she claims some of the mysterious quality ascribed to the Garbo, the goldenhaired actress will appeal to Americans more for her lively dancing and singing than for any talent she has along the Garbo line.

Miss Christians' first role in her new journey to the United States will be that of prima donna in "Arms and the Maid."

Slayer of Husband Freed From Life Term in Cuba

Havana, Sept. 23—A pardon from the life imprisonment imposed on her in Camaguey courts, for the slaying of her husband, took definite form for Ruth Kinsey DeCabra, American woman, when she walked to freedom early today.

Ruth Kinsey DeCebra

The pardon was given her last week by President Machado, but she was held in jail pending legal procedure for her release. This morning the order that she be allowed to leave the prison walls arrived.

Tabernacle Feast Will Start Friday

Succoth, or the Feast of Tabernacles, will be ushered in at sundown, Friday, in all synagogues and temples by the Jewish people.

This holiday, commonly known as the Harvest Festival, is the last in the cycle of the holy season, and will be observed for a period of one week.

BOSTON NEXT FOR AIMEE

Aimee McPherson and her new husband, David L. Hutton, are known leaving on their honeymoon trip and evangelistic campaign, including Boston. A Pasadena nurse filed a $200,000 suit against Hutton on breach of promise charges, but what's another woman to Aimee. She has her man. (I. N. R. photo.)

Aimee Expects $2,600 Daily in Boston War on Devil

9-DAY REVIVAL TO BEGIN ON OCT. 10

Evangelist's New Husband to Assist Her in Staging Meetings at Garden

Although uninvited by any church or other religious organization, Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton will open a nine-day revival meeting at the Boston Garden on October 10.

Announcement was made at Portland, Ore., last night by the famous woman evangelist that she had reached an agreement with Richard G. Dunn, manager of the Boston Garden, to rent the huge auditorium for nine days and that she was preparing to start east.

HAS FAITH IN PUBLIC

Dunn's original proposal to Aimee embraced a campaign on a paid admission basis with a $1 a seat minimum. Aimee, however, asserted she had faith enough in God and the people of Boston to believe she could raise the $2600 daily expense through free will offerings.

According to the terms of the contract Aimee has practically rented the 20,000 seat Garden from Oct. 10 to 18. The guarantee was underwritten from funds of the Angelus Temple, Los Angeles.

David L. Hutton, Aimee's song leader and latest husband, will accompany her on the Boston visit. The couple plan to fly from Los Angeles to Atlantic City, where they will spend a short honeymoon before coming to Boston. They expect to reach here Oct. 8.

LOCAL CLERGY COOL

Aimee plans to use her famous illustrated sermon methods in conducting her revival campaign here. Lavish scenic effects will be transported here from Los Angeles for use in the meetings.

As far as could be learned today Aimee lacks the support and invitation of any church and religious organizations here. Many prominent clergymen, interviewed last night, revealed a marked coldness toward the evangelist, although admitting the possibility they would attend some of the meetings.

Many ministers also expressed the opinion that Aimee's magnetic personality would pack the Boston Garden. Although distinctly opposed to the evangelist, it was admitted that her prominence and appeal to the mass of people would assure huge crowds at every meeting.

"DOOMED? WHAT OF IT?"

ELISHA KENT KANE MRS. JENNY GRAHAM KANE

"Am I afraid to die in the electric chair for my wife's murder? No, although I am innocent! I did not kill her!" That's what Elisha Kent Kane, professor at the University of Tennessee, said down in Virginia today. He is accused of drowning her in the very waters beside which she is here shown lolling. Today his preliminary hearing was postponed for a week. Kane (in inset) is a former student of the Harvard graduate school. (International Newsreel photos.)

LAYS PLIGHT IN 'WIFE MURDER' TO HER KIN

Professor's Hearing Delayed a Week; Sees His Future as Utterly Hopeless

By MARGARET LANE
International News Service Correspondent

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service)

Old Point Comfort, Va., Sept. 23—"I'm not afraid of death."

Elisha Kent Kane spoke very quietly.

We were drinking coffee together today by the open window, looking over Chesapeake Bay where just two weeks ago his young wife was drowned.

It was a few hours before the young professor was to have faced arraignment on the charge of drowning her with his own hands while she screamed for help. His hearing was later continued to Sept. 30 because of the illness of the dead woman's mother.

"Physcal death is not to terrible to me as life without the things I have lived for," he declared.

HOPELESS FUTURE, IF—

"Even if I escape the electric chair, my position—such as it is—is gone, my family disgraced, my wife dead."

It is not easy to describe Elisha Kane, University of Tennessee professor and former Harvard graduate student. A narrow face, gentle on the whole, but the eyes curiously intent. When he is speaking they fasten on you suddenly with an intensity that terrifies.

A serious man, one would say a man of powerful will, a man impossible to ignore.

We sat in th shaded window, and Elisha Kane told his story. It is a strange one.

"Wouldn't you think," he said, "I had suffered enough, my wife dying as she did under my own eyes, without this happening."

"It never crossed my mind that anyone would think that I had killed her. You see, whatever people may say, I was very fond of her and we had been happy together—

"But when I came back from the funeral the police were there and I was arrested as a murderer."

BLAMES MOTHER-IN-LAW

"I was taken from home and put in that grimy, unspeakable little jail over there. I can't tell you the condition of it. There were a couple of coughing consumptives in the cell with me and a cloud of flies.

"The heat was insufferable. I couldn't sleep. I couldn't think.

LADY'S A LADY IN JUNGLE

Mrs. Elizabeth Dickey has "city feet." She has returned to New York with her husband from their sixth trip into the jungles of Venezuela. Her feet rebel against the pavements after treading the soft Amazon trails. "Women are perfectly safe in the jungle," she said, "and the more feminine the better." Here she is with some of the trinkets she took to natives. (International Newsreel photo.)

EX GUINAN TO SHOW HERE

Texas Guinan, "too hot for Paris," and "much, much too hot" for Waltham, is quite cool for Boston, and has arranged to play here in a short time, with her whole revue.

The arrangements were made yesterday, after officials of the Boston Garden got in touch with the hostic lady, and it has been learned that Mayor Curley has no objections to the famous gag gal.

The Garden officials got in touch with Texas at her hotel yesterday, shortly prior to her departure from here to play at Providence. Their proposition was for a benefit show, the proceeds to be turned over to charity.

Tex, with plenty on her mind, decided on the spot that it was okeh with her if the permission could be secured and agreed point blank, then rushed off to Providence.

Mayor Curley, apprised of the proposition, including the fact that 100 per cent of the gate receipts will be for charity, immediately agreed to allow the lady to appear, with the band and the girls and everyone else.

'JUST A WIFE' IS DANGEROUS JOB

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—This country's 10,778,784 working women, their ways and their wages, have been placed under the microscope by the Women's Bureau.

Requested by clubwomen, the results of the studies are to be issued in a few weeks. The nation's 23,000,000 housewives, not listed as "gainful workers" by the Census Bureau, can then go fact-finding about their sisters of the pay envelope.

No idealistic picture of the noisy, speedy, mechanized industrial world for women was painted by Mary Elizabeth Pidgeon, research expert, in interpreting the working woman.

Yet she did not advocate the return of women, even married women, to the home. On the contrary, she urged them to keep up their earning capacity.

"There is no security in domesticity," the study contended. "Divorce, death or money loss may throw a woman upon her own resources. The married woman who let herself go upon the easy tide of domesticity is offering herself as a victim in a future tragedy."

Borah Sees Peril in "Too Much Gold"

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 23 (AP)—Senator William E. Borah expressed the opinion today that if an international money conference is not called "the money question will be one of the issues of the next presidential campaign."

"If the flow of gold," he said, "should continue in the next five years in the way that it has for the last five, the United States and France would have from 85 to 95 per cent of the world's gold. We should be rich in gold but bankrupt in markets for our goods and the products of our farms."

WOMAN DYING; SEEK AUTOIST

Providence, R. I., Sept. 23—Thrown from an auto, according to police, Mrs. Maude Evans, 37, of Hospital st., this city, was found dying today on Warwick ave., Lakewood.

She was taken to Rhode Island Hospital, where police are awaiting at her bedside to question her if she recovers consciousness. She has a fractured skull.

Warwick police have the description of a man whom she was seen with in that town last night. She was not with her husband, George Evans, who is mystified by the case.

Investigation convinced the police that the woman was not the victim of a hit-and-run driver and that she was pushed from a fast moving automobile.

RAIN AIDS IN DROUTH ZONE

Washington, Sept. 23 (INS)—Marked improvement in agricultural conditions in the Northwest, hard hit by drouth this year, was reported today by the weather bureau in its weekly weather and crop bulletin.

Aside from the abnormal heat, the outstanding feature of the week's weather was helpful moisture received over large portions of the Northwest, where the drouth conditions have existed, said the report.

The rains have materially improved the agricultural situation, especially as regard late pasture and conditions of the soil for plowing and seeding, from the Lake region westward, extending southward to northern Missouri, eastern Kansas and northwest Oklahoma.

'BOSSY' GILLIS' FOE LOSES JOB

Newburyport, Sept. 23—The troubles of a "trouble man," what with street fights with Bossy Gillis and such, ended today with more trouble for Eugene Twomey, president of the Newburyport city council.

Twomey, arrested Saturday night with fiery Mayor Gillis after an altercation between the two, today lost his job with the Haverhill Electric Co., where he was a "trouble man."

Gillis was not at home to hear what he would consider good news about his arch political enemy, having gone to Detroit Sunday for the Legion convention.

Six months ago Twomey aroused theire of Gillis when the latter chanmed exorbitant rates charged the city by Twomey's company had caused the removal of at least one large mill.

Twomey, as president of the council, appointed himself and Councillors Coffey and Simmons as a committee to investigate. No report has since been rendered.

DRIVER BEATEN AND ROBBED

John C. McAllister, of Marion st., Brookline, while playing the role of the good Samaritan in the Jamaicaway last evening by giving a stranger a ride in his automobile was relieved of $36, and his automobile stolen after he was slugged and thrown out.

McAllister walked into the Jamaica Plain station early today and stated that a stranger hailed him as "Hey Mac" and asked for a ride. McAllister stopped took the stranger into his car and started toward Brookline.

A few minutes after the stranger had been in the machine he asked permission to drive the car, which was granted him by McAllister, he said.

McAllister said he did not know what happened after that until he awoke on the lawn of an estate in Jamaica Plain, the rain arousing him. He found that $36 was missing and his car gone. He claimed that the stranger struck him over the head with a blunt instrument.

TYDINGS SEES VOTE FOR BEER

Washington, Sept. 23—United States Congress probably will act on a legalized beer proposal at the coming session, whether President Hoover recommends or opposes it, Senator Tydings (Dem.) of Maryland predicted today in discussing the economic advantages of such a step.

The Maryland anti-prohibition leader based his prediction upon the belief that the depression will steadily increase the Treasury deficit and force Congress to turn to legalized beer as a revenue raising measure.

There are definite indications, however, that the beer advocates in Congress can look for nothing but opposition from the President. Hoover's advisers have told him that he would destroy his chances for reelection if he deserted the drys, and the President apparently agrees with them.

Politicians are awaiting the decision of the American Legion convention at Detroit. A declaration for beer by the Legion, they say, would probably give the movement the impetus to put over the proposal in Congress.

Germany Mobilizes Guard of Frenchmen

Berlin, Sept. 23 (INS)—Elaborate precautions have been taken to guard Premier Pierre Laval and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand of France on their visit here Saturday night. More than 5000 police will guard the railway line over which the French officials will travel from the frontier to Berlin.

Twenty armed guards will run ahead of the French party in a "pilot" locomotive, heavily armed.

DOYLE TO BARE N. Y. GRAFT

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Dr. William F. Doyle, former fire department horse doctor who amassed a fortune in city pier lease negotiations, today dropped his mask of defiance before the Hofstadter legislative investigating committee, admitted splitting fees, and indicated that before the session was over he would tell with whom.

The ex-veterinarian indicated willingness to answer the committee's questions in exchange for its promise that he would be granted immunity.

His change of mien since previous appearances which resulted in a jail sentence for contempt because he refused to tell with whom he split fees follows the recent act of the New York Legislature which armed the committee with the power to grant immunity to witnesses.

The question about splitting fees was put to Doyle after he testified some of his records for 1925 and 1926 were missing.

"Did these missing records indicate to whom you had given part of your fees?" Seabury asked.

"They did not," he replied.

Asked how he recorded the split fees, the witness replied:

Claflin Guard Vets to Elect Officers

The 36th annual meeting and dinner of the Claflin Guard Veterans Association will take place on Friday evening, October 9, at the Brae Burn Country Club, West Newton. Officers will be elected.

DUMPED IN STREET ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

South Boston police are looking for a hard-hearted girl driver, who probably lives in East Cambridge. Meantime Thomas M. Ferris, of East Second st., is in bed nursing a fractured knee-cap. "Bobbie," the dog, has not deserted. The boy was hit by the girl's car on the Strandway and she took him in, to carry him to the hospital. Then she decided he wasn't hurt and put him out of the car. A passing motorist picked him up and took him home.

HUB AND LOWELL SHOW GAIN

Washington, Sept. 23 (INS)—Slight improvement in certain lines of business in 10 of 42 cities has been reported to the Department of Commerce during recent weeks, it was announced today.

The slight upswing was noted for Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Wilmington, Savannah, Birmingham, Grand Rapids, St. Louis, Dallas and San Francisco.

Other cities showed little change in the business situation.

The report showed increased industrial pay rolls in certain Massachusetts localities, including Lowell.

Britain Favors Italy's Armament Cut Plan

London, Sept. 23 (AP)—The British attitude toward the Italian proposal for an armament truce is a favorable one, Stanley Baldwin, acting head of the national government in Prime Minister MacDonald's absence, told the House of Commons today.

Lord Cecil at Geneva had been given instructions that he could give an undertaking that the British government would not increase its military and air estimates for 1932-1933 "above their present level" unless unforseen conditions or emergencies arose.

Rev. C. L. Worrell Primate of Canada

Toronto, Sept. 23 (AP)—Most Rev. C. L. Worrell of Halifax, archbishop of Nova Scotia since 1915, was today elected primate of all Canada by the House of Bishops of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada.

British Gold Issue Booms Business of Ocean Cable Lines

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—The lift wind that forced England off the gold standard has blown good for the transatlantic cable and telephone companies.

In two days, the unsettlement and international interest attendant on the British financial situation have resulted in a 20 to 25 per cent jump in the volume of transatlantic messages handled by Western Union and an increase of more than 20 per cent, in all types of messages handled by Postal.

Transatlantic telephone calls set an all-time record for non-holiday traffic on Monday when 162 were made.

Fruit Rate Decrease Is Refused Florida

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today dismissed the complaint of southern fruit distributors against freight rates on citrus fruit in carloads from Florida to states east of the Mississippi river.

In concluding the opinion, the commission said:

"As compared with rates from California of $1.55 to points west of New England and $1.58 to New England, the rates from Florida to official territory range from 81 cents to $1.26.

"Obviously Florida oranges can be delivered to all markets east of the Mississippi river at lower freight rates than from California."

FLIERS HUNT PLANE IN SEA

S S Stavangerfjort, at sea (by radio), Sept. 23 (AP)—The Stavangerfjord, with Willy Rody, Christian Johanssen and Fernando da Costa Viega, transatlantic airmen, aboard, passed the scene of the fliers' rescue today, but failed to sight their wrecked plane.

The spot off the Newfoundland coast where they were picked up is about thirty miles southeast of the regular steamship lane at this season.

Thieves Loot Store, but Refuse Charity

East Rochester, N. H., Sept. 23—Thieves who looted the drug store of James Stedman either have plenty of tooth paste or don't believe in accepting charity.

The only things missing were several toilet articles, with the purchase of which tooth paste was given free. The tooth paste was tied to the toilet articles but thieves untied each package.

Cap of Radiator Explodes in Face

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Charles Perkinson, 32, of Hartford, was taken to a hospital suffering from scalds and burns when a radiator cap on his truck exploded in his face on the Boston Post road.

Surgeons said his eyes and face were burned.

EPISCOPALIANS TO VOTE ON 'DRY' LAW

Denver, Colo., Sept. 23 (AP)—The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church may have an opportunity to express itself on a proposal for modification of the prohibition laws to allow manufacture and sale of beer.

Convention observers said the resolution likely would originate in the committee of 21, composed of seven bishops, seven priests and seven laymen, named to consider world problems.

The committee has before it a resolution presented from the diocese of central New York asking Congress to authorize a national referendum on prohibition. It was presented in the House of Deputies several days ago and referred to the committee without debate.

Hearings before the committee advertised as public announcements to the House of Bishops and House of Deputies yesterday began last night with a session closed to the press. Bishop James H. Freeman of Washington, D. C., chairman, said the meetings were open to delegates, but not to the general public.

65 MILLION LOSS IN FOREST FIRES

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—Forest fires in the United States last year burned over 52,266,460 acres with a loss of $65,968,350.

The Forest Service gave these figures today and said organized protection proved its effectiveness by keeping down fire losses on protected areas to 5,809,320 acres as compared with 46,457,140 acres destroyed on unprotected lands.

The total number of fires last year was 190,980, of which 70,832 occurred on protected forests.

Careless smokers were blamed for causing 17,460 or more than 26 per cent of all fires on the protected areas. The Service listed 607,920,930 acres in the country in need of protection.

BALDWIN TAKES BRITISH HELM

London, Sept. 23 (AP)—Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservative party, today was at the helm of the British government for the first time since 1929.

As lord president of the council, Mr. Baldwin became acting prime minister when Ramsay MacDonald left for a secret destination in the country to recuperate from the strain of keeping the pound sterling afloat on the world's money markets.

Some newspapers professed to see in MacDonald's departure a connection with the growing movement for an early general election on a protective tariff issue.

Story of Bournes' Parting Confused

Universal Service

Los Angeles, Sept. 22—Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Bourne, Sr., of Pasadena, were surprised today upon learning of rumors that they had separated. Many of the friends of the Bournes were inclined to discount the reports of a separation.

Due to a similarity of names, Mr. and Mrs. Bourne, Sr., were confused in a story appearing here with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Bourne, Jr., their son and daughter-in-law.

It was stated that in 1925 Mrs. Bourne had obtained a separation, that in 1926 she sued for divorce but that in 1927 there had been a complete reconciliation. These events concerned Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Bourne, Jr., and not Mr. and Mrs. Arthur K. Bourne, Sr.

For This Relief No Thanks

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

What can we do about the present situation?

We can talk.

That's all anybody else is doing.

There has been more lip service than it took to build the Tower of Babel. And that work was completed in one administration.

The smart birds aren't waiting for the politicians. They have already picked out their hollow trees for the winter.

All we know is that there is many a slip between the lip and the service.

Why is there a Republican and Democratic fight over relief when a hungry man will vote either ticket for a big, red apple?

And he will vote both tickets if you toss in a job.

DEATH SUSPECTS TRAILED

plice, made from an Oyster Bay speakeasy on the murder night, were traced to Queens.

3—Investigators found a witness who saw the Penguin putting out into the Sound on the murder night, and another who saw the suspected "pirates" in the vicinity on the day before the crime.

4—Cummings criticized the investigators and said they were slowing the trail of the slayers to "grow colder every day."

MEN'S CLOTHING WET

Suffolk County authorities stated that they had information that the supposed maniac, accompanied by a much younger man, appeared at a speakeasy in Oyster Bay, their clothing dripping wet, and had responded to some one in Queens to come and get them in an automobile.

Although the hour was 2 a. m., it was said, their friends or friends from Queens actually did drive out to Oyster Bay for them.

While waiting, it was said, the two men changed their clothes, taking dry clothing from duffle-bags similar to those described by Mrs. Collings as having been in the murderers' possession.

At the same time other telephone calls which also had been traced, were said to have revealed that the "maniac" and his younger companion engaged in a series of depredations in the vicinity of Huntington, Cold Neck, and Oyster Bay, meeting by appointment, and separating afterward.

Thefts of boats, the unlawful entry of at least one house, and the thefts of several automobiles were laid to the strangely assorted pair by Suffolk County authorities. One motorist, whose descriptions of them tallies with those given by Mrs. Collings, was said to have told of two attempts having been made by the same men to steal his car, both in one night.

WIDOW CLEARED

In a formal statement after he conferred with DiMartini and Minder on their return from Stamford, Blue said:

"Mrs. Collings has told the same story as when she was first questioned. Mr. DiMartini and Minder were very much impressed by her story. My actions will be guided by the facts as developed in further investigation."

Asked directly if he had eliminated Mrs. Collings from suspicion, Blue replied:

"I should say, yes. During 15 hours of questioning she answered readily and willingly with no apparent evasion.

STICKS TO STORY

"I would say from the report I have received from Di Martini and Minder that there are no material discrepancies in her latest story from the previous version she has given. "She has amplified certain phases of her story and has given us considerable more detail as to what happened the fatal night."

Dist. Atty. Blue pointed out that Mrs. Collings on Friday will have an opportunity to publicly testify and in this manner will for the first time, be in the position of giving her story officially to the public through the medium of the press.

"Certain angles of her story will be embarrassing to relate, but I am sure she is willing to do so in order that her story may be fully understood once for all," said Blue.

It is evident to all concerned at the present time that the status of Mrs. Collings in the case now hinges on the inquest on Friday.

Mrs. Collings remained in seclusion at the home of her father-in-law in Hillcrest rd., Stamford today.

It was the first day she was at liberty from the stream of questioning that has flowed upon her since the strange drama was enacted in the waters of the sound.

Two new witnesses whose stories tend to corroborate Mrs. Collings' account of what happened the night of the murder has come forward today.

CHIEF SAW MEN

One, a boat owner, told a representative of the Boston Evening American, that about midnight the night of murder, he saw the Penguin putting out into the sound. This witness was to be questioned at greater length by Dist.-Atty. Blue or Minder later in the day.

The other witness is Chief of Police Hewlett Jonnson of Huntington.

"The day before the murder," Johnson related, "I took my family to the beach at Port Jefferson. While we were there, I noticed two men some distance up the beach — a middle-aged, gray haired man, and a younger man or boy. So far as I know, they had no boat. They were orderly enough, but I didn't like their looks. It may be, now, that they are the same two we are looking for."

A flurry of excitement was occasioned by the arrest of a man who gave the name of John Hoffman, of Greenlawn, a taxi driver. He was taken into custody by Detective George Probeck and Patrolman John Hulsen. Probeck and Hulsen said that they trailed Hoffman to the home of a woman friend, and that, in the house, they had found a .22-caliber pistol.

But what connection this had with the Collings investigation was not clear, except that police all through Suffolk and Nassau Counties are checking up on everything that appears in the least suspicious, and apparently Probeck's and Hulsen's suspicions had been aroused with references to Hoffman.

Hoffman, however, insisted that he neither knew the Collingses nor anything about the murder, other than what he had read in the newspapers. Assistant District Attorney Minder stated that Hoffman was free of suspicion in connection with the Collings case, but Huntington police continued to hold him on the gun charge.

Youth Guilty in Bogus Check Case

Ralph A. Carlton, 22, of Spruce st., Watertown, was given a suspended sentence of six months on each of eight counts of larceny through bad checks when he was arraigned in the Waltham court.

SEES GAINS TO INDUSTRY BY WAGE CUTS

ly wage basis will not be affected.

The United States Rubber Company announced a five-day week schedule starting October 1. This will mean a reduction of about 9 per cent in wages to 25,000 employes. The hourly scale will not be touched, but no one will be given more than five days' work.

The American Smelting & Refining Company and the Utah Copper Company announced 10 per cent wage reductions effective Oct. 1.

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. announced that, effective October 1, it would reduce the hours of work of salaried employes 10 per cent, and compensation for employment would be cut proportionately.

General Refractories Co. of Philadelphia said it had reduced wage rates similar to that effected by other industries.

LABOR REGRETS MOVE.

A forecast of resistance came from Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, after the announcement by United States Steel. He said:

"I can only express great regret and profound disappointment at the action of the United States Steel Corporation. The disappointment is particularly justified because this action is in sharp contradiction with that of the same corporation some time ago in reducing dividends, but declining to cut wage scales.

"At that time the attitude of the United States Steel Corporation was received with satisfaction by all who believed that any dislocation of wage schedules would be a most disturbing factor, economically and socially."

FIRST CUT SINCE 1921

The pending cut in steel wages is the first since the depression year of 1921. In the case of the Steel Corporation it is expected to result in a saving of $7,500,000, or 35 cents a share, on approximately 8,700,000 outstanding common shares in the last quarter this year.

For a full year, on the basis of an estimated payroll of $300,000,000 for 1931, which is below normal, the additional earnings made available for Steel common would be approximately $3.20 a share.

The reductions, if carried out in steel and related industries would affect more than a million workers.

Meanwhile unofficial rumors were in circulation that the oil companies are considering a downward revision in salaries and wages, although no confirmation could be obtained on this point.

Independent companies in the Chicago area, including Inland Steel, American Steel Foundries, Acme Steel and Wisconsin Steel, have no proposal for the reduction of wages under consideration.

ON "STAGGER" SYSTEM

In the case of the steel companies the lowering of wage rates follows a long period during which the maximum number of employes were retained on part time, known as the "stagger system." This involved no change in the hourly rates of pay, but resulted inevitably in a reduction in the income of the worker.

There was a substantial increase in wage rates and a reduction in hours in 1923, which was the last wage readjustment made.

In 1921, when the depression period was much less severe and of smaller duration than the present one, three successive wage reductions were ordered in a single year.

In the last two years of slack demand the Steel Corporation and some other of the large steel producers consistently pursued the policy of alternating the work available among employes.

MYSTIC AND CLOWN MEET

GANDHI

CHAPLIN

By T. C. WATSON

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

London, Sept. 23—Charlie Chaplin, because of whom millions have laughed, and Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, the man without humor, who has swayed millions with hope, met here in an obscure room deep in the London slums.

There, in the grim East End where Gandhi has chosen to live while in London, and from whence came Chaplin with a native semi-tragic sense of the comic, these two men talked an hour.

CHILDREN CROWD ABOUT.

They exchanged views on the modern machine age, which Chaplin finds a blessing to man and Gandhi a curse. Once during the conversation the men of laughter stood curiously by while Gandhi and his two women companions squatted on the floor to say their evening prayers.

The man of laughter and the man of hope arrived for their momentous meeting at the home of Dr. C. L. Katial, an Indian, physician and friend of both, while hundreds of children—urchins of the poverty ridden neighborhood—gathered outside for a glimpse of their idol—the clown and London's curiosity—the mystic. So great was the crush that two children were trampled and injured.

In Dr. Katial's surgery—a barren little room with only a few worn chairs as trimmings and a view of the vast East India docks from its window—the two men met.

QUIZZED BY CHAPLIN.

When first asked to meet Chaplin, Gandhi had asked:

"Who is this Mr. Chaplin?"

Now the two men sat together on a sofa with Mrs. Sarjoini Naidu and and Miss Rei, the former Madeleine Slade, daughter of a British admiral, who are the Indian Nationalist leader's close disciples, in nearby chairs. Mrs. Naidu broke the ice. She said:

"Mahatma, Mr. Chaplin also has influenced millions; he has made people both laugh and cry."

Chaplin then said:

"Mr. Gandhi, I have always wanted to meet you because I never have been able to understand your viewpoint regarding the non-use of machinery. Are you not denying your people the blessing of the inventions which have been the gift of the gods to man? Are you not keeping them in medievalism?"

To which Gandhi answered:

"You have only taken the occidental viewpoint, Mr. Chaplin. It is my people's welfare I am thinking of. I am not dealing with civilization such as you know it. One small English county, such as Lancashire, can manufacture enough cloth for all England. The result is the inhabitants of 700,000 villages in India are without work four months yearly. They need work, not leisure."

After a moment's pause, Chaplin replied:

"I realize the logic of your position, but I am still unable to agree with you."

Gandhi put Chaplin's finger tips together and kissed them as the comedian bade him farewell, saying:

"May all good go with you."

BIGELOW 'WIFE HOAX' REVEALED BY HOSTESS

phoned to Niles from the Ritz-Carlton two weeks ago last Friday.

"MEET THE WIFE"

"Stephen had called up a lot of friends and told them he was married," she said. "He invited Mr Niles into the Ritz Carlton to meet the bride and we both went in.

"We extended our congratulations and she was formerly introduced to us as Mrs. Bigelow. The very fact that they were at the Ritz Carlton would have allayed any suspicions, if we had had any. But of course we had no reason then to doubt his word.

"Mr. Niles and I thought it would be a splendid idea if we invited them to dinner at our home. We asked them out for the following Sunday. They both came for dinner.

"Both of them reiterated that they were married. She said the wedding took place in Paris last March and Mr. Bigelow corroborated her statement to that effect.

"HAPPILY MARRIED"

"Why, we did not have the slightest idea that we were the victims of a hoax! We had not seen Mr. Bigelow for a long time and naturally were happy when he told us he was happily married.

"The girl appeared to be of excellent refinement and well-mannered. It was not until the day after the dinner at our house, when I spoke to a certain person about Stephen's marriage, and told of his being our guest, that suspicions were created in my mind for the first time that they were not man and wife.

"After that Mr. Bigelow's friends denied he was married. We are convinced we were the victims of a hoax.

"I think he did it for a joke,

KANE UNAFRAID TO DIE

I asked for pencil and paper and tried to forget my misery in work. I'm writing a book and, trying to work on it, took me somehow out of myself.

"Then there was another shock for me. I learned that the most damning statement that had been made against me originated with my wife's mother. I couldn't believe that she could say such untruths. I don't want to be bitter about anyone, but I cannot help thinking she must have been worked upon by her husband and son. They always disliked me.

"My mother-in-law didn't visit me in prison. I have never seen her since she made those statements against me. Now I'm out on bail I'd be glad to see her—maybe I could explain things."

He was silent for a moment and then abruptly changed the subject. We talked about his work and he became pleased and more cheerful in a discussion of medieval French poetry and the translations he had made. He recited the couplet from Dante which he had inscribed on his wife's grave.

"SO THAT'S THE MAN"

Suddenly Kane's face changed. A white-haired, almost bald-headed man in a linen suit had come into the restaurant. He chose a table at some distance, and Kane watched him narrowly. It was Prosecutor Harry M. Smith.

"So that's the man," said Kane, "that's aiming to get me in the chair?" Then he was himself again and smiled.

"It's a strange thing," he said, "in a way, I'm glad it's come to a trial. Now that suspicion has been voiced against me I want to fight it to the bitter end.

"I may prove my innocence—I may not. Either way I don't particularly care. Death isn't really important."

The talk came back to his dead wife. One of the weapons of the defense is that Jenny Kane had a weak heart, which possibly accounted for her falling and drowning in four feet of water, although her husband struggled to save her.

I asked Kane how the prosecution could charge him with murder without making sure by exhumation whether his wife had had a heart attack or not. He shrugged his shoulders.

"They can do anything," he said. He did not explain why the defense did not insist on an exhumation.

LIFE AT HARVARD

He drank his coffee slowly, his strange eyes fixed on the window.

"I hope to God it'll soon be over. I want to get back to my work. And if I never—well—I can die without flinching," said Elisha Kane, almost dreamily, but somehow, stoutly.

At Harvard, where he attended the graduate school, they will tell you that Kane was a quiet, unassuming fellow, a plodding, dreaming student. He did not make many friends in Boston and Cambridge, but the ones he did make are staunch and true.

They, no doubt, are watching, with interest the plight of another Kane come to judgment, a Kane whom the state charges, as Cain in all save the spelling of his name, but he is 40 years old—far too old for a man to be carrying on jokes that might be expected of a college student.

"I don't know where either of them are and I don't care if I do not see them ever again."

The girl's father was not on duty today and was still conducting an anxious search for her.

At the Mefferdi home on Sutherland rd., Brighton, her uncle said:

"We don't care to say anything more except that we are satisfied that they are married and both of them are welcome here at any time, he has not come home yet."

GOLD DREAM OF AGED BANKER SHATTERED

San Francisco, Sept. 23 (AP)—His dream of having a nation-wide chain of banks [illegible] by seventy-six [illegible] in official connection with Transamerica Corporation and the organization's change in policy, Amadeo P. Giannini, 60-year-old financier, said today he would retain his stock in the company.

[illegible] of the two billion dollar [illegible] has passed to Lee, Higginson and Company, New York.

FORCED TO RESIGN

In a statement coincidental with the reorganization announcement, Giannini disclosed that he had tendered his resignation as a member of the Transamerica Board of Directors last June "because I could not approve the plans, policies and procedure of my successor, Chairman (Elisha) Walker."

The California financier said he had vigorously opposed the new plans of the directors. The latter announced it would not declare a dividend on Transamerica stock for the October quarter, out of "prudence and conservatism."

NET VALUE LOWERED

The directors' analysis of Transamerica's total showed a net value of $173,091,000 after deducting borrowings, accounts payable and reserves. On a basis of 25,000,000 shares of stock outstanding the indicated value of each share thus would be slightly less than $7.

The stock sold yesterday on the New York and San Francisco exchanges at $5.12 to $8.25 a share.

Transamerica's assets are shown to have decreased June 30, 1931, to $262,117,000 from $1,117,192,000 on Dec. 31, 1930, by shrinkage of quoted values of securities.

HEIRESS JAILS FORMER FIANCE

New York, Sept. 23—The meeting the latter part of this week between Muriel Stern, young heiress of 300 Riverside drive, and Frank Hillman, 24, college graduate and radio man, will be chilly—oh, very chilly.

Only a few months ago they were engaged to be married, so Muriel says, adding Frank then ran off with $5000 she lent him to enter the poultry business in Philadelphia. Instead, Muriel charges, Frank took the money, married Edith L. Rant, an actress, and lit out for Hollywood.

Hillman was arrested in Los Angeles and New York detectives have gone there to bring him back. He is charged with grand larceny.

Italy Plans World Hop by 24 Fliers

Rome, Sept. 23 (AP)—Air Minister Italo Balbo was reported today to be planning a mass flight around the world by a fleet of 24 Italian military airplanes.

The pilots and crews are said to be in training in the new air school at Orbetello. It was said that the venture might start eastward from Rome and end with a transatlantic hop from New York to Rome.

Roxbury Woman, 70, Hit by Trolley, Dying

Miss Johanna McCarthy, 70, of No. 1576½ Tremont st., was probably fatally injured today when knocked down by a trolley car in front of No. 88 Warren st., Roxbury.

In City Hospital she was found to be suffering from a fractured skull and injuries to the right leg. Her name was placed on the danger list.

Doctor Kills Self in Face of Charges

Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP)—Dr. Max Fischman, 46, prominent physician, shot and killed himself today several hours before he was due at city court to face a charge of illegal surgery with Policeman Joseph Dominico.

Fischman, a native of New York, had lived in Yonkers for 21 years. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

LAST RITES FOR T. L. WALSH IN CLINTON

Gov. Ely, members of the judiciary and bar, and scores of clergymen today paid final tribute to Maj. Thomas L. Walsh, brother of U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, at services in St. John's church, Clinton.

Led by eight State troopers on motorcycles and a delegation of Clinton police, the cortege moved from the Walsh home on Water st. to the church, with members of many delegations following on foot.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., former president of Georgetown University and Boston College. He was assisted by Rev. John P. Sullivan, deacon, and Rev. Thomas S. Dillon, sub-deacon.

Pallbearers were John E. Swift of Milford, law partner of Maj. Walsh, Attys. D. W. Corcoran, Daniel F. O'Connell, Roscoe Pyle, Frank T. Ryan and Charles F. Campbell, Judge Frank McCooey of Blackstone and Dr. William F. McNamara of Clinton.

A large number of priests sat within the sanctuary during the mass and delegations from the Boston and Worcester County Bar Associations occupied special sections.

Prayers were read at the grave in St. John's cemetery by the Rev. Patrick J. Griffin of St. John's Church.

EX-KAISER GIVES PHOTO TO RYAN

William A. Ryan of 44 Linden st., Dorchester, promoter of a world federation of municipalities today received an autographed photograph of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm Hohenzollern which he interprets as an endorsement of his plan.

"The ex-kaiser cannot say much because of his position, but I believe his friendly gesture in sending his photograph shows he is in sympathy with the federation," said Ryan. "On the back of the picture is written, 'Many thanks for your greeting.'

"It would be a fine thing if his abilities could be switched from organizing for combat to organizing for peace. He is an excellent organizer."

In a letter to the former emperor Ryan had written: "Greetings to the Sister Community, Doorn, Holland. You have been reduced from empire to neighborhood, signalizing that war and its attendant miseries is not a going proposition. Shall the writer bid you to use your organizing influence in the opposite direction—namely, to get Doorn and all Holland cities federated for peace with the Municipal Federation as the instrument?"

He Thanks Ryan

Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, from his refuge in Doorn, Holland, has sent to W. A. Ryan of 44 Linden st., Dorchester, his autographed photograph, with thanks for an invitation to join Ryan's "World Federation of Municipalities" in the interest of peace.

WILKINS' MEN TELL OF ARCTIC DIVE PERILS

London, Sept. 23 (INS)—Running under the Arctic ice cap in a submarine is like running blindfolded through a forest and continuously banging into trees, members of Sir Hubert Wilkins' polar submarine expedition said on their arrival here today.

Several members of the crew of Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine Nautilus are in London preparing to return to the United States on the steamship American Banker, which sails Friday. They eagerly discussed their experience in the Nautilus while cruising under the ice cap three weeks ago.

ICE DIN TERRIFIC

"When we were under the ice it was like running through a forest blind-folded, banging into the trees," said Electrician Holland of the Nautilus. "We hit plenty, too.

"The noise of the ice crunching against the sides of the boat was terrifying at first, but we soon realized that the shape of our boat made it like a drum, and the noise was much worse than the actual danger."

Holland expressed confidence that only the month's delay occasioned by the necessity of making repairs at Southampton after crossing the Atlantic prevented the Nautilus from reaching the North Pole, as Sir Hubert planned. When the start finally was made it was too late in the season, Holland said.

NEARLY ALL DEAF

"The food in the Nautilus was satisfactory throughout," he continued. "Once we were obliged to melt ice, however, to obtain water. Occasionally there was as much as two inches of ice formed inside the submarine.

"Most of us suffered deafness on account of the noise of the ice outside the sub, and the engines inside. Occasionally we played cards for recreation, and we had some good shooting at seals and birds in the ice fields when we arose."

Chinese Gold for U. S.

Shanghai, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Central Bank of China today shipped to America gold worth $2,600,000 in American dollars on the liner President Taft.

JAPAN AVERTS RUSSIAN CLASH IN CHINA

Shanghai, Sept. 23 (AP)—Danger of Russia being drawn into the Sino-Japanese imbroglio apparently was averted today by the decision of the Japanese military not to occupy Harbin.

Tokio seemingly has determined to keep the Manchurian crisis strictly an issue between China and Japan, excluding all interventions, whether by Russia, the League of Nations or the Kellogg anti-war pact signatories.

Although the Japanese chief of staff in Manchuria had ordered troops to move into Harbin to protect the Japanese community there, the cabinet at Tokio evidently decided it was not worth while risking Russian intervention and ordered Changchun made the northern limit of the occupied zone.

N. Y. JOURNAL 35 YEARS OLD

New York, Sept. 23 (INS)—Remember the bad old days of 1896?

If you do you may recall that Anna Held's horses were wearing trousers; that the Rev. Charles Henry Parkhurst was denouncing grafters; and that Charlotte Smith's bicycle brigade was patrolling the streets of New York to detect any who smoked or flirted.

The events of the gay '90's are recalled by items in the first issue of the New York Evening Journal which celebrates its 35th anniversary on Sept. 28th.

Acquired as a morning paper from John R. McLean on Sept. 28, 1895, it was established as an evening paper on Sept. 28, 1896 by William Randolph Hearst. It has thus continued under one ownership for a longer period of time than any other New York newspaper.

Here are some of the headlines from that first issue of the Evening Journal:

"Legions will flock to hear Mr. Bryan."

"Paul tried to fly but fell 65 feet."

"Fear the effects of Gladstone's speech."

"'Treason' the word Parkhurst uses."

Eddie" Hart, of the street-laying-out department in City Hall, whose fame as an orchestra leader is widespread, is now making phonograph records. His first record, "It's a grand old game," a baseball number, goes on sale next week.

GRADUATES NEXT JUNE

"Tim" Doherty, of the city collectors office, has entered his fourth year at Suffolk Law School. He hopes to graduate from that institution next June.

MRS. GAGNON WITHDRAWS

Mrs. Helen Gagnon of Brewster st., South Boston, who was to have been a candidate for school committee withdrew from the contest yesterday in favor of Henry J. Sullivan.

MURPHY NOW DADDY

Thomas E. Murphy, associate director of the Tercentenary parades of last year, became a daddy yesterday. A son was born to Mrs. Murphy, the former Helen M. Milan of Woburn in Cambridge City Hospital. "Tom" says the youngster will be a politician when he grows up.

CURLEY CAMPAIGNS

Edward J. Curley, candidate for school committee, spoke at house rallies in Mattapan and Roslindale last night.

COFFEY NEUTRAL

Charles V. Coffey, of Brighton, who has withdrawn as a candidate for the school committee, owing to the sickness of his wife, declines to endorse the candidacy of any other contestant, or to take sides in the race.

HARTIGAN TRIES AGAIN

Joseph F. Hartigan, of Lamont st., Roxbury, is a candidate for the city council from Ward 9. He tried for the office two years ago and was defeated by only a few votes.

DOUGLAS SEES ELY

Congressman John J. Douglas of East Boston paid his first visit yesterday to Governor Ely at the State House. The Congressman, who declared that he was feeling fine, received many congratulations on his recovery from a recent illness.

CONGRESSMEN TALK NAVY

While Congressman Douglas was in the ante chamber of the executive suite, his colleague from Lynn, Congressman Connery, came in and talk drifted to the chances the Boston navy yard has of getting some shipbuilding. Douglas felt sure the yard would get at least one destroyer unless the naval program should be seriously cut.

POLITICAL CLAMBAKE

Rep. Louis Pfeiffer of Bedford is giving that much talked-about clambake to the members of the Legislature next Saturday at Mc-Govern's farm, adjoining his estate in Bedford. The outing is a non-partisan affair and it is expected that the host will have something to say regarding his aspirations for the Speakership.

DIRT-ROUTING NEW SOAP

brings joyous relief to overworked women

● Wise housewives know that most disappointments and extra work in washing clothes and dishes come from not having enough rich suds. Suds are the test of a washing soap.

Now comes a new soap discovery, perfected by the makers of Ivory Soap, which makes more suds—suds that do more work—than any soap you've ever used.

This amazing new soap is Oxydol.

Oxydol is supercharged (with pure rich soap) for 50% more suds than other soaps in granulated form—quicker, longer-lasting suds that do quicker and better work than any others.

Because of its greater sudsing power Oxydol does more—lessens your share of the work.

When you buy soap ask yourself, "How much suds am I getting for my money?" For, remember, it's really suds you are buying.

Live, rich Oxydol suds never quit on the job—they stand up, keep working, until the last particle of dirt is routed. Weak, old-type suds fall back, sink lower and lower causing the dirt to fall back also and you are left washing in dirty suds-water.

Soaks clothes snowy white

Oxydol saves your strength because its live, rich, fast-working suds soak clothes snowy white with no back-tiring rubbing.

Everything you wash with Oxydol comes out whiter, daintier, sweeter-smelling and in less time.

Softens hard water

The minute you put dirty clothes or greasy dishes into water you harden that water.

Oxydol makes all water soft.

In even the stubbornest hard water it gives 50% more rich, live suds.

Wonderful for dishes

Oxydol cleans dishes and glassware spotlessly—and lightning fast. You simply dip and rinse—and the dishes are done—gleaming bright. They dry without wiping, if you prefer, for Oxydol leaves no clinging film.

Easier on your hands

Try Oxydol once and you'll use it always. It leaves your hands so nice and smooth that you'll know it's the perfect soap for even your most dainty, delicate things.

Let Oxydol save your strength by lightening the hardest jobs in housekeeping—washing clothes and dishes. Its rich, amazing suds can do so much for you.

Ask your grocer today for the big-sized orange and blue package. Then you can face washday with a smile. Procter & Gamble.

50% MORE SUDS—live instant suds, that outwash and outlast all others—that's why Oxydol cuts washday work, makes dishwashing easier

GUARANTEE

If you do not find that Oxydol makes more and richer suds—that it soaks clothes gleaming white—that it makes hard water soft and works better in any water—just turn the package back to the store where you bought it and your money will be returned.

VESTRIS TRAGEDY IS VIVIDLY RECALLED

By Gilbert Seldes

THE NOVEMBER GALE which terrorized the world three years ago when the S. S. Vestris sank, has been so far forgotten that the report of litigation over damages the other day came as a surprise. The shock is gone; the owners will protest that an act of God wrecked their vessel, the claimants will allege negligence. In five years, perhaps, settlements will be made and the name of the Vestris will join that of the Titanic and a few others, remembered only as an excitement.

Gilbert Seldes

Neither the owners nor the next-of-kin of the drowned will offer a novelette in their testimony, and, in fact, S. S. San Pedro, by James Gould Cozzens, does not explain the sinking of the Vestris, on which it is openly based. It does something on which it is openly based. It does something infinitely better; it makes the sinking an actuality. It is written by a man who knows ships and knows human beings and knows how to write, so that in three ways the record becomes clearer and more interesting than the original fact.

You begin with a visit to the departing vessel; a ghastly figure, Doctor Percival, with a gray and fleshless face, is reassuring the captain of the San Pedro about his health, the ship is loaded; the doctor goes ashore and in a strange way the fate of the vessel is written.

Sense of Doom

It holds off; there must be life first, the life of the crew and of the passengers, before the blow begins and the ship starts listing. Nothing happens suddenly; "everything is going to be all right." The captain's will is paralyzed; he is old and will not accept suggestions from his inferiors: it is against his tradition to abandon ship. Meanwhile the San Pedro takes water, to the fury of the Scot engineer.

"He did not know where so much water was coming from, but he was, he felt sure, more than a match for it. He would have his bilges dry before morning. If it came to that, he could and would pump out the whole blasted ocean. He'd have no dirty water in his department."

The technical man knows his job; the statesman in command believes that something will happen, a miracle to save him. The two wireless operators talk grimly of Bacardi rum as a mouth wash—to take out the taste of salt water. When it is too late, the order to abandon is given; the boats smash. The will-less captain insists on the discipline of the sea: "Officers will carry out orders to the best of their ability." "And then without pause or warning she went."

The whole story is admirable. It omits all the literary fireworks of a shipwreck at sea; it is not a chromo with lightning flashes. The disaster is felt through the human beings who experienced it, with their wit and courage and fear and stupidity; the record is set down without hysteria in a little over a hundred pages of clean and simple writing.

English Detectives

Two things about English mystery stories always affect the American reader. One is the constant complaint of the detective against the British legal system: after tons of evidence have been collected, the detective always says, "The Yard wouldn't dare to make an arrest without proof" or, "The Crown would refuse to prosecute on such flimsy evidence." It appears that the British take the assumption of innocence quite seriously.

The second thing is the high literary average of the stories. Mr. Kenneth Macgowan, in his book called Sleuths, has offered a little explanation, for he has prepared a series of Who's Who of the great detectives of fiction; and it appears that the English detective ranges from a lord to a barrister-at-law, and his hobbies run from book-collecting to mariculture. Nearly all the detectives write a little themselves. You remember Sherlock Holmes' little monographs; perhaps you do not know that Mr. Fortune has written on Fallacies in Burgundy and that the blind Max Carrados (whose mother was an American) wrote on Unedited Greek Coins. Only the most intellectual of the authors—the Coles, who are famous economists—have created a detective, Supt. Wilson, who is not an intellectual himself.

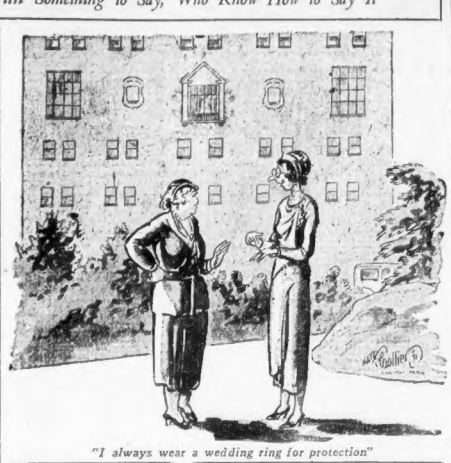
Sleuths is not a biography of detectives; the Who's Who takes a page for each one, and the rest of the book is given over to sample stories, each illustrating the method of the detective in action. Mr. Macgowan has managed to find a Father Brown story which is first rate and not too often reprinted; a Peter Whimsey which is highly diverting; and altogether has collected 23 excellent English and American stories. It is the best collection since The Omnibus of Crime.

Achievement

This is our gift from Life: this way
And that way we are sent
Till we have learned on some still day
How we may be content.
To lift our chains off and be free,
Speaking with smiling eyes
Of all things gone, not bitterly,
Of how they made us wise.
How there were shining lands to reap
And shining things to gain,
And how the best of all we keep . . .
Wisdom, and rest from pain.
—Margaret Widdemer.

Memorials

Not marble monuments, or shrines,
Or wooden crosses, are as real
Memorials to those we loved
As things we see and hear and feel.
A casual word, a wistful tune,
A fragrance blown from garden flowers,
May make as actual as now
The sense of unforgotten hours.
Sunsets, and scents, and budded springs,
The joy that love of living lends—
When comradeship has shared in these,
They each bring back the absent friends.
Charlotte Becker.



"I always wear a wedding ring for protection"

Caine's Fame

—By Michael Joseph—

BY THE DEATH of Sir Hall Caine English literature loses one of its striking personalities. So active was he until his last illness that it is difficult to realize he began his career at a time when Charles Dickens was a best-seller. The son of a blacksmith, he was born in Liverpool and passed his early days in the little island which his novels were later to make famous. Like Thomas Hardy, he was apprenticed to an architect, but journalism and lecturing soon attracted him.

A lecture on Dante Gabriel Rossetti brought an appreciative letter from the artist-poet inviting young Hall Caine to visit him in Cheynewalk, London. The invitation was accepted and Hall Caine stayed for two years. He was at Rossetti's bedside when he died in 1882.

After Rossetti's death Hall Caine settled down for some years as a journalist and publisher's reader in London. Then he returned to the Isle of Man to write his first novel, "The Shadow of a Crime," which has run through 30 editions. All Hall Caine received for his work was an outright payment of 50 pounds. His third novel, "The Deemster," made his reputation.

As a playwright Hall Caine was spectacular but less successful; although a theatrical manager once referred to him in a lawsuit as "a bigger money draw than any dramatist after Shakespeare."

Hall Caine had a remarkable hold on the British public, possibly because he wrote and lived, outwardly at any rate, in the grand manner. In attire he was eccentric. On one occasion it is recorded that he appeared "clad in a frock coat, grey knickerbockers, and woolen stockings." In later years he was said to have encouraged the report of his facial resemblance to Shakespeare. He was certainly a picturesque figure, and his flowing locks and impressive black cape undoubtedly appealed to the imagination of the unsophisticated Victorian public.

The "Life of Christ" had adorned his attention for at least 20 years before his death, and the journey he made to Palestine a few years back probably caused his death, for he told me at the time that his health had suffered. The "Life," although unfinished, is colossally long and at least a million words will probably be published.

Spode

That pitcher there, with quaint device,
Upon the shelf, a curious bit,
Because I paid for it.

She calls it Spode, my loving wife;
Just what that means I cannot say;
It is a joy that lights her life;
She dusts it every day.

Like a devoted worshiper
She speaks of it in tender tones;
It is a precious boon to her,
I feel this in my bones.

Twould be from it a pain to part;
Without it what were this abode?
I often wish with all my heart
My middle name were Spode!
Clinton Scollard.

Young People

—By Deems Taylor—

EDNA FERBER, just back from Europe, doesn't think much of the Younger Generation. The American younger generation, that is. Over there, she says, the young people can and do discuss international affairs and public problems. Here, their conversation is more or less strictly confined to "Oh yeah?" (A correspondent of the Evening Post takes issue on this point with Miss Ferber, insisting that they can also say, "Know any more funny stories?") Taking them by and large, they have an average mental age of 12 years, in her opinion. The discovery seems to have depressed her.

Deems Taylor

After having looked over a number of Europe's young people from time to time, I am quite ready to believe that they could and did discuss serious matters—with me. I am also sure that a not too disgracefully small proportion of our own youngsters would be prepared to discuss matters other than gin and necking if they were introduced to, say, John Galsworthy or Rebecca West.

Afraid of Her

In short, Miss Ferber overlooked the fact that she is a celebrity, and that any European young thing that converses with her is bound to play up a bit, and make conversation suitable for the ears of a distinguished person. Granted that one of them may not have heard of her, he would nevertheless be likely to put at least his second best foot forward conversationally. Most of us become unwontedly intellectual in the presence of a foreigner.

Besides, even if Europe's young folks are more serious than America's, it is not necessarily because they are more intelligent. It may be that there is a far simpler reason: they are probably not so happy.

Granted that our younger generation is a bit fluff-minded—why not? Unless the world changes to its very foundations—and there are no signs of such a change—our immediate successors are likely to discover all too soon that life is real, and all the rest of it. If they can manage to find a few years in which to be completely chuckle headed and irresponsible and not-give-a-damn-ish; if they really can offer "Oh yeah?" in all confidence as the complete solution of all our life's problems, I, for one, regard them with nothing so much as envy.

Too Intelligent

Miss Ferber's remark about "a mental age of twelve" has an ugly sound, but it must not cause us to despair too much, even if it is true. The trouble with intelligence tests is that they are generally conceived and planned by intelligent people.

Accordingly, their estimate of what an average mind should be is generally one that would wreck the average mind. The system works out exactly the opposite to that devised for grading children's clothing. Nobody has ever seen a five-year-old child, for instance, who wears five-year old sized clothes. He always takes either a six or seven. On the other hand, the average seven-year-old child has generally a five-year-old mind.

Miss Ferber's trouble with the younger generation is, of course, disappointment. Youth is hope. We look at these youngsters of sixteen, eighteen, and twenty, bursting with vitality, their purses crammed with unspent years, and for a moment we have the mad illusion that they are to be the ones who will avoid all our mistakes, finish our half-done jobs, plan where we muddled, run where we walked, begin, not where we began, but where we leave off.

And then we listen to them talk, and observe the contents of their minds, and realize that the world is going to continue being pretty much what it always has been. It is not an easy thought to bear.

Other Men's Ideas

From "Happy Days Will Come Again," in the current Harper's, by Elmer Davis:

Where are those sage and prudent now? Feeling sick . . . as they think of the summers in Paris and winters in Havana, the cabin cruisers and custom-built cars they might have bought . . . The reckless are flat, too, but they had their fun while they could pay for it. They cruised . . . saw the horses run, watched the little wheel spin round.

Maybe they have nothing left now but their memories; but receipted bills from the Rue de la Paix and bar checks from the Berengaria are more agreeable souvenirs than stock certificates, no matter how handsomely engraved. The sage and prudent passed up these worldly gauds, because they were building for the future; and . . . they here highly resolve that that is one mistake they will never make again.

Man About Town

—By AL DUFFY—

CASIOFF

So, now you've got yourself another heart,
A younger, gladder girl to go the pace;
And I should tear my settled life apart
Because you fall for every pretty face.

She's young, you say, and how she understands
Your moods, your needs, your every small desire—
So, what should I do? Hire three German bands
To celebrate my love dragged in the mire?

So, all right, Casanova, have your way,
Have laughs, have nights that are a long, sweet song,
But when you've tired of girls and song and play
Don't look me up, for, dear, you've got me wrong.

The truth is, and I say it full of joy,
That I have found myself another boy.

By Louella O. Parsons

Melvyn Douglas Added to "Prestige" Cast, Ann Harding's Next Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Sept. 23—Many are called but few are chosen.

What do I mean? Let me explain. I mean many stage players get invited to Hollywood, but few of them remain.

Louella O. Parsons

Melvyn Douglas, signed by Samuel Goldwyn for Gloria Swanson's picture, "Tonight or Never," remains right in our midst.

Mr. Douglas, say those who know, is a talented actor. He created the role on the stage that he is playing in Gloria's next picture and now he has been borrowed for "Prestige," Ann Harding's next RKO-Pathe production.

I know you have all heard about "Prestige," so I will be brief. It's a story of Indo-China by Harry Hervey and Tay Garnett directs. Tis the first melodrama Ann has had and according to all reports it's a thriller.

Now, about Gloria. Why criticize her for not speaking about her reported marriage to Michael Farmer? Gloria is not dumb. She wouldn't be so foolish as to marry anyone before her divorce decree is final. She feels it is foolish to even deny so idiotic a rumor and I think she is right.

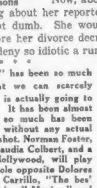
"The Dove" has been so much discussed that we can scarcely realize that it is actually going to be produced. It has been almost like a myth, so much has been said about it without any actual scenes being shot. Norman Foster, husband of Claudia Colbert, and a favorite in Hollywood, will play the juvenile role opposite Dolores Del Rio. Lee Carrillo, "The bes' dam caballero in all Mexico," and Stanley Fields in an important part, are all signed.

* * *

One of the most interesting figures who has visited Hollywood in a long, long time is Hope Williams. On the stage she is a glamorous, alluring creature, but on the street a tailor - made, almost plain young person. She is getting ready for her part in "Penthouse" which will be retitled. Joel McCrea, as we announced some time ago, will play opposite her. But another bruiser fully as good for her as the signing of Joel McCrae is the news that Edward Everett Horton will furnish the comedy relief.



Hope Williams

One is the postponement of Elissa Landi's trip to Europe. Miss Landi had her ticket, her bags packed and was all ready to go when the studio suggested that she wait for Winfield Sheehan to return. Until he puts his okay on "The Yellow Ticket," Miss Landi will have to remain in Hollywood. Universal is getting ready to put an auto racing story on the screen, Vin Moore to direct.

Seen and Heard

Another Hollywood actress gets sick from too much reducing. We should put this in headlines for other people who take patent medicines and engage masseuses who give too strenuous treatments. Winnie Lightner has been ill several weeks. Winnie reduced pounds and pounds and pounds. Her ambition is much like a nervous breakdown and her friends say it is caused by reducing. Winnie was supposed to be well enough to begin work on "She Means Business" next week. Meanwhile, let's hope our actresses get some sense and if they want to get thin exercise properly and go on a diet prescribed by their physician.

Snapshots of Hollywood

JEAN HERSHOLT surprising his wife with a birthday cake and a party. ERIC VON STROHEIM and MRS. ERIC among the guests. LAWRENCE GRANT telling stories on the English, proving he has a sense of humor. HOBART BOSWORTH discussing MAURICE BARRYMORE, the famous father of the Barrymores. MR. BOSWORTH telling many interesting anecdotes about actors of another day. MRS. BOSWORTH, pretty young wife of HOBART, studying psychology at the university. The HERSHOLT'S young son, ALLAN, home from military school to take part in his mother's birthday celebration. JANE MURFIN, FREDERICK BEECHER and a group of others discussing plans for the motion picture relief fund. GLORIA SWANSON and her wise to get married before her divorce is final, laughing at the stories printed. MARION DAVIES' Hollywood friends getting up at the crack of dawn to greet Marion when she arrived yesterday. HERBERT SOMBORN making plans to open another Brown Derby in Beverly Hills.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Stage Who's Who

George W. Farren, the Supreme Court judge in "Precedent" at the Plymouth, is a native of Boston. He began as an amateur at old Union Hall and made his professional debut in "The Soudan," under Larry McCarthy, at the Boston theater. He has travelled wide and far since then and played with many great stars and in big productions. When the late Arnold Daly started out to introduce G. B. Shaw's plays to this country Farren played all the prominent character parts in the entire list, including "Candida," "You Never Can Tell," "How He Lied to Her Husband" and "Mrs. Warren's Profession." He also took a hand at directing the famous Castle Square Company here for one season. Has had numerous stocks of his own and also appeared in prominent characters in support of Mrs. Fiske, Henry Miller, Madge Kennedy, the Coburns, Mme. Simone, the great French actress, Leo Carillo, Gertrude Elliott, Blanche Bates, Tom Wise and Mary Boland.

Now You Can Have STAINLESS
Vicks VapoRub

Your Same Vicks...Only Color Removed...Same Formula Same Price

HERE'S real news! Science has found a way to remove the color from the world's most famous treatment for colds—without altering the time-tested formula an iota! It's your same Vicks—just all chance of stain gone!

Why 26 Million Jars Are Used Yearly

For twenty-five years Vicks VapoRub has been the mothers' reliance—the family standby for cold troubles. Like nothing else Vicks acts externally—without the risks of "dosing"—direct to the affected area—by stimulation and inhalation—two ways at once.

In Golden Amber or Stainless White

Now your druggist has Vicks in the original amber or the new stainless white form—as you prefer it. It's the same dependable Vicks . . . same time-tested ingredients, compounded in the same exclusive Vick way—at the same price.

Early Saturday morning about 3 on West 54th st. . . . Two gents in high hats pulled down over their ears, their arms wrapped around each other, sig-sag in the middle of the street, one of them shouting, "Shteady, bwoy, take 'er eashy" . . . Saturday night at Dr. Leo Michel's . . . Ada Mae Weeks, blonde musical comedy star, slumped in an easy chair, urges her wire-haired fox terrier to sing . . . Micky Kempner, the composer, fingers a soft Viennese waltz on the grand piano while Morrie Green, the producer, confides to Lee Chamley, the tall, gray-haired Village restaurateur, that he plans to keep Joe Cook out of New York until next season . . . "I wish," murmurs Ada Mae, dreamily, "I had a bedroom on top of the Empire State building."

At Dinty Moore's Wednesday night . . . Ray Bolger, the thinbish dancing star and his blonde wife, Gwen Rickard, discussing the trimmings of their new apartment . . . Barbara Blair, the Scandals gal enters with Bill Hardy and Walter Haggerty, Wailin' wall lads, and Bolger dashes over to greet them, returning a few seconds later . . . "Looks that Hardy" smile, he chirps, "He just lost three million on the market today" . . . Dr. Julius Lempert and his bride, Flo Kennedy, settle down at a table in the rear . . . "Going to Europe next week," he remarks . . . Bought a farm in Norwalk. What's good to eat tonight? . . . At a table near the entrance, Joe Frisco in an orb-destroying orange tie endeavors to lock the part of a celebrity . . . Later at the premiere of "Singin' the Blues" at the Liberty . . . Tall Gary Cooper surrounded by lads and gals with out-thrust programs for him to autograph. . . . Jimmy walked about six blocks his path . . . "Gee, you're a big guy," he pipes up, "Give us a quarter, willya?" . . . During intermission Lew Fonda greets us at an orangeade stand and insists on paying the nickel for our drink . . . "What's the matter with you," he growls, "I'm in the money now ain't I?" He turns to the song writer, Jimmy McHugh . . . "You have one, too, I'm paying" . . . Later, Fay Marble, tanned to a sepian hue, whispers from her seat in back of us, "I've lost ten pounds. Should I advertise?"

At the Napoleon Club early Thursday morning . . . The raven-locked Ziegfeldzer, Emmita Casanova, in a wistful mood . . . "I'm tired of Broadway, I wonder if my complexion'd spoil if I lived on a farm." . . . Her escort snickers . . . "What would you do on a farm with nothing to do but drink milk?" . . . Bert Fiedler and his bride, Harriet Anenberg, discuss their experiences abroad . . . Lina Basquette, in a black hat drawn low over her forehead, stares about out of melancholy eyes . . . Phil Baker moves about restlessly . . . Sonya Mitchell settles down next to us . . . "You've changed a lot, Louis," she insists; "you're not as kind-looking as you used to be. What's a nice suit you've got on. I hear you're a rotten driver." . . . Saturday night at the Park Club . . . Jo Fejer glares at a boisterous yap . . . "An artist is singing," he says . . . An exotic-looking gal in a crimson, tight-fitting dress warbles enticing lullabies in a clear, rich contralto . . . A Russian countess, we're informed, but later we hear her confide to a table neighbor that her mother is Spanish and her father Hungarian, but her tastes are "seemp-lee Paree, no?" . . . George Jessel joins in with the singing trio . . . Jesse Scott tosses us a smile and dashes upstairs to play backgammon.

Wednesday noon at the Friars' Club . . . S. Jay Kaufman, the Broadway columnist who reformed, hands us some fatherly advice . . . "Be sure to pack your column with good names—and don't think it's only Broadway names that count' . . . Early Thursday morning in Lou and Eddie's . . . Bushy-haired Jay Flippen, his brow gnarled in thought, says he's been sitting here trying to think of a new gag for you, his volunteers. "As soon as I have worked it out, I'll wire you" . . . Saturday night on West 86th Street . . . Eddie Moran, the stooge scene, greets us . . . "Gee," he murmurs gratefully, "you really talked to me. You don't know how happy that makes me. I just clocked a thrust called 'Television,' and instead of passing me by you say 'hello.' Gee, you don't know what that means to me. Meet my wife."

Sen Bernie at the Paramount Friday night . . . "Everybody's wearing Eugenie hats," he whoots. "Now it's Queen Mary's turn to laugh" . . . Tuesday night at 58th Street and Broadway . . . Tall Abe Lyman: "What are you going to catch my act at the Palace? I read in the papers where it's pretty good, yessir, pretty good—if you believe the papers" . . . Earlier that evening at the opening of the Ferde Grofe revue, "Fast and Furious" . . . Bob Coleman, the dramatic critic, carrying an umbrella . . . Saturday night at Chumley's . . . Jack Spivak, author of "The Devil's Bridge," whispers hoarsely, "Have you heard this one? A Yale graduate received a wire from his orthodox Jewish father, 'Remember Yom Kipper tomorrow,' it read. The sap wired back: 'Okay. Bet twenty bucks on the nose for me.' Cute, hey?"

Later that night at the opening of B. S. Moss' "Varieties" at the Broadway Theater . . . The wide-mouthed Joe Brown spreads his familiar grin and delivers a conventional but sincere sounding talk on how good it feels to talk to one's public . . . Jack Pepper introduces Sophie Tucker from the audience and the stoutish lass receives a unanimous ovation . . . Friday night at the opening of the new revue at Connie's Inn in Harlem . . . The bewildering dance specialty of Earl "Snakehips" Tucker and the brownskin gal, Bonnie Dudley . . . I've seen nothing to compare with it in all my days on Broadway—or in the flicks . . . They shiver and quiver, they dance on their thighs and on their ears; they throw themselves into the air and dash themselves against poles . . . what a dance team! . . . Earlier that week at the Cotton Club . . . Suave Dan Healy and Ted Koehler, the lyricist, swapping yarns of days in Chicago . . . The platinum-locked Claire Ray at a ringside table, fascinated by the grace of Hemi Wessels . . . Same places . . . New York isn't so large after all . . . Must begin to look around for other spots . . . For snapshots . . . For the Album of the Manhattan!

"RHAPSODY IN BLACK" PROVES GENUINE REVUE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The architecture of revue generally holds to form. Innovations in this kind of entertainment are usually the same old thing in a new suit of underwear. It is, therefore, pleasant to report that Lew Leslie's "Rhapsody in Black" at the Majestic is something both new and novel in the tinted entertainment of Harlem and which, at the same time, balances its color with genuine entertainment.

* * *

For here you will find in artistic display the primitive note and color of the African dong in new fashion. If the colored revue has not really gone high hat it has, at least, taken on a new tailor. For in "Rhapsody in Black" the familiar old plantation on the Yazoo is left flat in Mississippi, while the warm tints of upper Manhattan strut in fancy steps in evening dress, takes the place of bicolored denim. There is neither hollyhock nor cotton bale, nor even the old and always reliable steamboat landing to tempt your eye; nor the darkie roustabout who seems always willing to drop a bundle of fragile freight for a first class wrestle with some spiritual. All these items of familiar memory are absent in "Rhapsody in Black." The Negro has moved north to stay and, as Mr. Leslie has arranged it, to make merry in the approved style of the nation's metropolis.

Of course, "Rhapsody in Black" is revue, which in another manner of description is just one thing after another. But it is all dressed up in the latest fashion. With all its primitive character in voice and squirming bodies, with all its orgy of music and orchestral crash, it still remains very fancy metropolitan entertainment. Ethel Waters, of course, holds the stage on several occasions. Her talents in song and chatter are not only well understood but are always taken at full value. Miss Waters is a lively entertainer and, as it turns out, leaves little to the imagination. As speed is the essence of all successful revue, "Rhapsody in Black" carries its own insurance in this simple matter through the lithe figure of Ethel Waters.

Having turned its back on all the old and reliable numbers in musical shows, and leaving the perspiring darkie in his cotton field, "Rhapsody in Black" makes atonement by dragging out spirituals and blues from the night club area. Songs by the dozen assail your ears and, strange to say, most of them possess real merit. If the music is agreeable, what of the titles? Here are a few: "Gettin' Up Mornin'," "Heard Nobody Pray," "Bonus in Love," "Am I Blue" and "You Can't Stop Me From Loving You." Every one of them carries its own message to nervous feet and you might as well know that the twitching toes of the performance are not restricted to the boys and girls on the stage. Tapping soles are heard from pit to gallery, a tribute of no small measure to the lively genius of Pike Davis' Continental orchestra.

While Ethel Waters, tanned and smiling, and also amiably talented, dominates the show, she is not denied rather fetching support from several quarters. The Berry Brothers, for example, show what can be done with two pair of feet when the music gets warm. The local stage has never witnessed such speed. Blue McAlister is another dancing companion while Valaida, dusky and shapely, swings a wicked baton over the Pike Davis Orchestra.

In "Rhapsody in Black," Lew Leslie reaches for a new note and hits it squarely on the head. He has created a revue in the tints and shades of Harlem and has let it go at that. The old plantations stuff is left down South.

Rhapsody in Black

The Players

Ethel Waters, Robert Haines, Ernest Boyd, Valaida, Elaine Ligarno, Berry Brothers, Blue McAllister, Bessie Dudley, Earl Tucker, Cecil Mack's choir, Pike Davis' orchestra.

Orchestra to Be Feted

As an expression of appreciation for the concerts provided at Brookline Field semi-weekly during the summer, Brookline will honor the People's Symphony Orchestra and Will Dodge, conductor of the programs, at a testimonial concert at Brookline High School Hall on Thursday evening, arranged by the Chamber of Commerce that sponsored the outdoor feature.

At the same time there will be an opportunity to see and hear Russell Boardman, Brookline resident, and John Polando, famous long-distance fliers, who are coming especially for the occasion and will be introduced to the audience and speak briefly concerning their record-making flight.

The receipts from the concert will go to increase the fund being raised to defray the expenses of the outdoor series and provide suitable remuneration for the musicians, as an exception to the rule at the summer concerts, to which there was no admission charge, the admission fee to Thursday night's concert will be $1. Tickets may be procured at the Brookline Chamber of Commerce at Coolidge Corner, Brookline, or, if any are left, at the high school on the evening of the concert.

Mr. Dodge has arranged an unusually attractive program, featured by the appearance of two soloists who won plaudits during the outdoor season—Dai Buell, Newton's internationally famous pianist, and Frances Peskette, well-known Boston lyric soprano. Miss Buell will play the solo part of Chopin's F minor piano concerto, and Miss Peskette will sin, an aria from Massenet's "Herodiade."

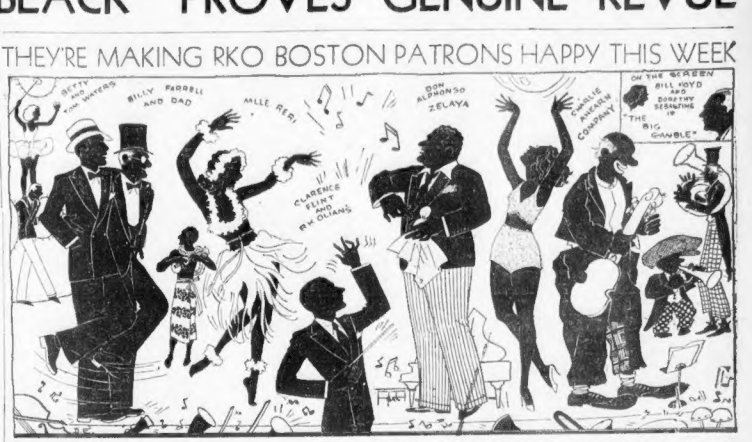
THEY'RE MAKING RKO BOSTON PATRONS HAPPY THIS WEEK



IT IS a well balanced vaudeville bill that greets patrons of the RKO Boston this week and with Clarence Flint directing the orchestra a snappy good time is had by all. On the screen is "The Big Gamble," featuring Bill Boyd and Dorothy Sebastine.

Stage Career Started Here

Kay Hess, of Grauman, Hess and Vallee on the Metropolitan stage this week, will always remember Boston, for it was in Boston that Grauman, the owner of the act, broke her into vaudeville. This was a little over a year ago. Since then, this dancer has traveled all over the country, winning laurels by her terpsichorean abilities. Upon reaching California, the film moguls enticed her to make several "shorts."

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Twenty thousand young Fascisti, executing amazing war games and athletic stunts, are shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News and thrillingly described by the Globe Trotter.

The first picture ever made of a ride through the treacherous Five Fingers Rapids on the Yukon river, on the Canadian-Alaskan border, are shown. Aimee McPherson and her new hubby are seen and heard in their "love nest" in Los Angeles.

That the memory of Knute Rockne spurs the Notre Dame football team on to great heights is shown in the first pictures of the team's training for the coming season. Gen. Smith, commandent of West Point Military Academy, accepted a bust of Marshal Foch as a gift from the leading military school of France. With French officials Gen. Smith reviews an inspiring parade by the cadets after the speechmaking has been concluded.

Koussevitzky Sails for Boston This Week

Serge Koussevitzky sails from France this week and will immediately prepare for the opening of the 51st season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall, on October 9. The Monday evening series of six concerts will begin on November 9, and the Tuesday afternoon series of six on November 24. A large subscription is reported for both series. The usual soiree in Boston, Cambridge, Providence and greater New York.

Buster Keaton Comedy at Loew's State Friday

"Sidewalks of New York," starring Buster Keaton, will be the screen attraction opening Friday at Loew's State. "Sidewalks of New York" is Keaton's first picture since "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath." Included in the program are a Fitzpatrick Travel-talk, "Madeira," a Metrotone sports reel, "Splash," a Krazy Kat cartoon, "Soda Papa," and Hearst Metrotone News.

"Street Scene" Opens at the Orpheum Friday

"Street Scene," with Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr. and Estelle Taylor, is the picture coming to Loew's Orpheum Friday. The Great Nicola, world's master sorcerian, will headline the new vaudeville bill. He brings to Boston his inimitable concoction of magical feats that have mystified the peoples of the four corners of the world. Charley Abbott and Gus Robbins in their original comedy skit entitled "I Want Women," with Ida May Sperrow, are another highlight of the bill.

MRS. JAMES GARFIELD OF CAMBRIDGE, THE NEW president of the Nursery Training School of Boston, is to sponsor the initial public appearance here on Friday morning, November 13, in the ballroom of the Copley-Plaza, of the Princess Der Ling of China, who will speak of "Life at the Manchu Court."

MRS. JAMES GARFIELD

The Princess Der Ling—sounds like darling, doesn't it?—was born in Tientsin, China, daughter of Lord Yu Keng, who was a Manchu of the first rank and whose forebears came to China with the first Manchu emperor. While the Princess was a still a child, her father served as Chinese Minister to Japan and later acted in the same capacity in Germany, Italy, Spain and France, besides being sent to the United States on three special diplomatic missions. Lord Yu Keng was accompanied on all three journeys by his daughter, who received a very unusual and varied education, including, while the family lived in France, study for the stage under Sarah Bernhardt and Isadora Duncan.

It was on returning from France that the Princess was ordered to the Manchu Court by Her Majesty Tzu Hsi, the late Empress Dowager, to whom she became first lady-in-waiting and favorite. Since the fall of that famous dynasty, Princess Der Ling has devoted much of her time to writing, and has published several colorful books about the court life of which she was an intimate part. She is remarkably gifted as a speaker.

Mrs. Russell Codman Elected President

THE NURSERY SCHOOL LAST YEAR SPONSORED the Theater Guild production of "Porgy" and Eva Le Gallienne's first night here in "Peter Pan," and expects to achieve the same social and financial success attained in earlier benefits with this Manchu Court morning at the Copley-Plaza.

COURT LIFE MAY SOON BE a thing of history, and those in this generation who are privileged to hear at first hand of this fascinating and romantic setting should seize the opportunity. Kings and courts may disappear but their memory will live forever.

* * *

AND SPEAKING OF ROYALTY of the intelligensia, Mrs. Russell Codman has been elected president of L'Alliance Francaise, the first time a woman has been given that honor. Mr. Frederick S. Whitwell has resigned that position after holding the presidency for several years. This winter the Whitwells are to be in Santa Barbara, Mrs. John C. Gray is an active member as are also the T. C. Thachers and Mrs. Thacher. Mrs. George Cushing, Mrs. Boylston Beale, Miss Grace Nichols, Miss Annie Endicott Tompkins, Mrs. Henry D. Tudor and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth.

Mrs. George Cushing

MR. AND MRS. BERNARD C. CARTER (Hope Thacher of Boston), who have been residing in Paris where Mr. Carter is vice-president of Morgan & Co., Paris, that fashionable foreign address for visitors, have been in Boston this summer. They have divided their time between their parents' places at Murray Bay in Canada and Yarmouthport on Cape Cod. They are now at the T. C. Thachers at Yarmouthport but will soon depart for France.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. CLARK WINTER, who have been in Europe all summer, have returned and are pulling up stakes, moving from Cambridge to New York City where Clark is to study architecture. So many young husbands are "studying"—it seems to be quite the racket after matrimony. Of course, it cannot be done unless there are money bags somewhere in the background and there are plenty in this instance.

* * *

MRS. EDWARD FAY OF Milton is to spend the winter in California. Her daughter, Miss Jessie, is to be at Dobbs—not bats—and will have her distinguished entrance to social circles in a couple of winters.

* * *

MR. ROBERT PERKINS IS taking a house in town this winter to facilitate the presentation of his charming daughter, Miss Elsie. Their large estate in Framingham will be kept open and no doubt many snappy weekend house parties will be enjoyed. The Perkinses are among the horse-lovers as are the Bowditches, Emerys and Clarks of Framingham.

PRISCILLA DENNETT, WHO will be one of the prettiest girls to make her bow this season at a large luncheon on the North Shore, will leave later to attend that fashionable girls' school, Fermata, at Aiken, S. C. Next year she will go to college. She is the true American type, light brown hair, blue eyes and clear skin, slim but without angles.

BROOKLINE GIRL WEDS

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM G. SALTONSTALL following their wedding yesterday in First Parish Church, Brookline. The bride was formerly Miss Katharyn Watson, daughter of the Lester Watsons of Hammond st., Chestnut Hill. Mr. Saltonstall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saltonstall. (Staff photo—see photo of bride and her attendants on Page 13).

Miss Watson Fall Bride

The altar of the First Parish Church of Brookline was decorated with white and yellow gladioli when Miss Katharyn Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Watson of 340 Hammond st., Chestnut Hill, was married yesterday afternoon to Mr. William G. Saltonstall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saltonstall of Readville. The Rev. Vivian Pomroy officiated.

Mrs. Felix duPont, Jr., of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Elizabeth Hovey of Boston were the honor attendants. The bridesmaids were the Misses Marjorie and Caroline Saltonstall, sisters of the bridegroom; Elizabeth T. Wheeler of Chestnut Hill and Sylvia Grinnell of New Bedford.

The bride's gown of white satin was finished with a bertha of old family lace and a tulle skirt, with train of the satin. Her veil was of tulle held with a closely fitted cap circled with a wreath of orange buds, and she had gardenias and lilies of the valley in her bouquet which was finished with long streamers of lace.

The matron of honor wore turquoise blue taffeta and velvet hat of the same shade, ornamented with a feather, and carried yellow roses.

The bridesmaids' costumes were also of the blue, in similar style, but with mixed flowers in their bouquets.

The maid of honor was attired in yellow taffeta, with velvet hat and plume of the same shade, and a variety of flowers as her bouquet.

Leaders Will Sponsor Play Series

As the time draws near for the opening of the Junior Theater season presented by the Professional Players on Saturday, October 31, at 10:15 o'clock, the list of subscribers grows.

The dates for the six plays, though subject to change, include the following: October 31, "Tom Sawyer"; November 21, "A Kiss For Cinderella"; December 12, "Treasure Island"; January 2, "Quality Street"; January 23, "The Prince and the Pauper"; and February 13, "The Ivory Door."

A delightful repertoire, this, and though the series are to be presented for young people between the ages of seven and 12, they will not, under any circumstances, "play down" to the youthful mind, but rather "are chosen to give the best in dramatic entertainment for boys and girls," besides charming their parents with their unique appeal.

They are considered as much an important part of education as "art galleries and symphony concerts."

Many Uses for Chic Jackets

By ANN ARDEN

A FULL KNOWLEDGE of style should be part of every girl's entrance requirements for college and with thoughts of appropriate, multi-duty clothes uppermost in the minds of alert young things who are planning their fall wardrobes for home or college, how many have considered the shorter fur jacket as an adjunct to the right kind of wools necessary to our chic and happiness?

The intense enthusiasm for things jacketed has brought the shorter fur coat into prominence for both formal and informal wear. The fact that they are interchangeable with a variety of frocks enhances their value, they can be formal or informal according to the frock or hat accompanying them.

The jacket pictured is fingertip length in tan lapin, semifitted, with cut-away fronts and button closing. The adjustable collar folds to revers, or snuggles close to the chin. The sleeves are interesting, with flare below the elbow, caught to the wrist, emerging to slight lower flare.

This is worn with a knit costume, wine red and white, and wine red suede toque, left side of moulded brim held by three gaily colored feather birds perched against crown. The ensemble is perfect for the first fall games.

Stylists have been gyrating about wondering whether the short fur jacket would carry all before it this season as it did last winter. It looks now as if the answer is "yes." There are all sorts of short fur jackets made as parts of costumes that are really perfect in style. The nicest part of lapin is that it is actually inexpensive and smart at once, and has been bounding into popularity for sports and general daytime wear.

Ann Arden will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

Society Girls Return From Europe

Boston people seem to be quite scattered about in New York right now, on shopping tours, landing after a summer in Europe, or just getting a bit of the gay life, as they are.

Miss Helen Slone and Miss Dorothy Powning, who are staying at the Ambassador, have just qualified for the second classification, returning from a marvelous trip, on which they stayed with all sorts of celebrities, etc., such as the Countess Ronald de Danne (Elizabeth Stone), a cousin of Miss Stone's, at her villa outside of Paris, and later, in Germany, the Countess Friedrich Franz Grote (Rachel Derby Smith) at her beautiful place in Mecklenberg.

Miss Slone is the daughter of the Robert Stones of Dudley st., Brookline, while Miss Powning's parents are Mrs. Mary G. Powning of Brookline and Manchester, and Henry G. Powning of Marlborough st.

Miss Powning's sister, the former Miss Jane Powning, who was married last fall to Mr. Edward S. Gates, has also recently returned from a whole year in Europe, quite a glorified wedding trip, in fact. Mr. and Mrs. Gates will live in Boston this winter, though right now they are staying at Wyndhurst, with Mrs. Gates' mother.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr arrived only yesterday from a summer in Europe, and are staying at the Berkshire until they plan to come on to their place in Milton, where they will stay late into the fall. The Countess Eleanora Colloredo-Mannsfield is to be with the Burrs this winter when she makes her debut, though she has not yet returned from Europe with her mother. Mrs. Burr will probably do something very nice in the way of a party for the young countess.

Mrs. Russell H. Leonard and daughter, Joan, are evidently on a shopping tour, and are staying at the St. Regis, as there have been no signs of a return from anywhere in particular.

MANY WOMEN PREFER
ARCH PRESERVER SHOES

The DIONNE $10-50

A fashion leader and a comfort leader is this smart one-strap with centre buckle. Black kid with black suede tweed trim; also Prado tan with contrasting trim, and patent leather with contrasting lizard trim.

From talks with our customers this spring and summer, we learned that many women wanted a medium-priced Arch Preserver Shoe.

The new Arch Preserver Shoes for fall, therefore, lay special stress on the medium price models. Here you will find Arch Preserver Shoes for general daytime wear, for dress, for walking, for sports.

Arch Preserver Shoes are unlike any other shoe. They are the pioneer comfort shoe; and today, as always, are the leader in the comfort field.

Their comfort-bringing features have been proven by time. They have been in use long enough for women to know what they do for tired, strained, abused feet.

Arch Preserver Shoes have a rigid arch that cannot sag or break down. It supports the foot surely and comfortably until the day the shoes are worn-out. There is a special metatarsal support to relieve the troubles that come from the forward arch of the foot. There is a perfectly flat innersole to prevent squeezing of the toes. Try a pair.

Remember that in Boston, women can obtain Arch Preserver Shoes only at the Walsh Arch Preserver Shoe Shops; that we use the scientific heel-to-ball system of fitting; that Arch Preserver Shoes are priced as low as good shoes can be priced; $8.50, $10.50, and up.

Open every day including Saturday until 6 P.M.

Miss Julia Lee to Wed Soon

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic S. Lee of New York and Woodstock, Vt., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Julia Lee, to Mr. John Harcourt McDill, son of Dr. and Mrs. John R. McDill of Washington and Waukesha, Wis.

Miss Lee attended the Brearley school, was graduated from Bryn Mawr in 1927 and received the degree of master of science from Yale University this year. She was presented to society several years ago and is a member of the Junior League and the Cosmopolitan Club.

The bride-to-be is a granddaughter of Mr. John Stebbins Lee, first president of St. Lawrence University, and of Mr. Frederick Billings, former president of the Northern Pacific Railway.

Mr. McDill is a graduate of Yale University in the class of 1927 and is now a member of the faculty at Yale. He belongs to the Chi Psi and the Elizabethan Club. He is a grandson of Dr. Alexander Stuart McDill, a pioneer physician of Wisconsin, and of Mr. Henry Neale of San Diego, Cal.

New Office for Comdr. Alger

Comdr. J. A. Alger, chief-of-staff, New England division coast guard, has been ordered to Seattle, Wash., to take command of the new cutter, Chelan.

The Chelan is attached to the northwestern division and cruising in the North Pacific, Bering sea and Alaskan waters. He will start for the Pacific coast next Wednesday.

Comdr. Alger was in command of coast guard section base 8, East Boston, prior to going to division headquarters a year ago.

Comdr. Alger whose home is in Winchester, will be succeeded here by Comdr. J. A. Starr, now in command of the coast guard destroyer Wilkes.

St. Peter's Club to Stage Social

St. Peter's Catholic Club of Dorchester has completed plans for the annual social and bridge whist to take place Friday evening in Ronan Hall, Bowdoin st., Dorchester. Proceeds of the affair will be used to equip the football team with new uniforms.

THIS IS LIFE

GRAVE CRISES ARE NOT TIMES FOR SATIRES ON GOVERNMENTS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

"WHAT A WONDERFUL TIME W. S. Gilbert would be having if he were still writing in England today!" suggests a correspondent obviously all excited by the two "Mikados" who are making the punishment fit the crime on the Boston stage this week.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

It's a natural thought—but, with all due respect, I doubt it. These are no days for the fantastical and satiric poet. Even Bernard Shaw, whom one might think beyond the chastening effects of circumstance, confessed that he could do nothing worth while during the war. A few far-fetched and worthless farces, like "The Inca of Perusalem," but little else. Not until the war was safely over did Shaw emerge from his own bolt-hole with his Chekhovian satire, "Heartbreak House."

Similarly I doubt greatly whether William Schwenck Gilbert, Shaw's forerunner in topsy-turvy satire, would find anything in his country's situation today to inspire a new "Pinafore" or a new "Iolanthe." I name these two because they contain Gilbert's sharpest attacks on the paradoxes and anomalies of his English civilization.

Even Crooks Grow Gallant

No, satire and serious extravaganza flourish best when a people basks complacently and securely in its place in the sun, when a nation is rich and fat and secure and content, when all things seem for the best in the best of all possible worlds. It was our McKinley and Hanna swell-headedness that barbed the shafts of Mr. Dooley and George Ade. And our cocksure wealth and power of the past 20 years almost automatically produced Messrs. Broun and Mencken.

But if you follow current English literature at all—even the lightest of fiction—you will note that it is increasingly romantic, idealistic, hopeful beyond hope, Galahadish, almost Tennysonian. Not merely in Warwick Deeping's books and "The Good Companions," but even the heroes of the crook and mystery novel wear a gallant air of being Saint Georges and Robin Hoods so different from our own gangster scoundrels.

It was the utter and unquestioned security of the things that today seem so seriously shaken that gave W. S. Gilbert his opportunity. It was the fact that the British navy was the strongest and stoutest in the world that allowed him to play with it as he did in "Pinafore."

Dick Deadeye might plot and grumble, but he remained an Englishman and you could have slipped him a "red" pamphlet only at your peril.

One could still believe in the doctrine that family tradition and gentle breeding do in the long run prove more efficient than vaulting ambition from the slum. Only in that belief would he have dared show us that amazing peripety at the end of "Pinafore," when the babies who were changed at birth took their rightful stations; the captain became an able seaman and Ralph Rackstraw wore the epaulettes.

Navy Above Suspicion Then

Gilbert mocked at the lawyer who became first sea lord. Even more extravagantly he might have laughed at a trades union treasurer who becomes chancellor of the exchequer—for it could have been only a joke.

In Gilbert's day there was no breath of criticism to touch the British navy. The mutiny of the Nore was safely forgotten, so short is human memory. The pound sterling was like the rock of Gibraltar, now that the hard days of the Napoleonic wars had passed out of memory. The "stately homes of England" stood as firm and as splendid as the caste system of which they were the symbol.

Democracy was beginning to be potent. A noble lord confronted with its rise was admitting that "we must educate our masters." But if it had been a real threat, do you believe that Gilbert could have rhymed as he did in "Iolanthe," those verses begging for a little respect for blue blood?

High rank involves no shame,
We boast an equal claim
With those of humble name
To be respected.

Admirable fooling in the '80s. Serious sociology now.

One remembers figure after figure in which Gilbert played sharply and shrewdly with the follies and anomalies and ignoble tendencies of the England of his day. But all the jokes were based, surely, on the rock-bottom certainty that here was the proudest, steadiest, safest, sturdiest society in the world, able to stand anything, including (in the words of the insurance contracts) acts of God or of the alien enemy.

A Shakespeare Is Need Today

Pooh-bah, whose noble blood gave him the right to hold down all the offices he could lay his hands on with their emoluments; the Duke of Plaza-Toro, that eminent stuffed-shirt; the King in "The Gondoliers," who spent his leisure, since he had no government duties, in keeping the palace spic and span and running errands for the Cabinet; the Penzance policeman (one of the new criminologists), who recognized that even criminals had their human side; and the peer in "Iolanthe," who agreed in Gilbert's sharpest and most subversive verse, that if he had been born in Whitechapel or Seven Dials, he, too, might have been a criminal; the Major General, who knew every art but the art of modern war (a thrust which the World War was to prove altogether too true), and the basso Sentry, who showed in a memorable solo that politics was pure determinism, since every boy and every gal who's born into this world alive is either a little Liberal or else a little Conservative.

So many of the things that Gilbert took lightly in the '80s we have to take seriously now. There's a bad crack in the morale of the hearts of oak that man the fleet; there's a bad crack in the pound sterling; workingmen sit in high places; and the House of Lords is actually reduced to that impotence which Gilbert pointed out as desirable. The House of Peers, perforce withholds its hand. Noble statesmen no longer "interfere in matters which they do not understand." Yet the corollary hardly follows. The bays of Britain hardly shine as bright as in the days of spacious Elizabeth and of glorious George.

These days are not fit days for a Gilbert. But they need rather badly that William Shakespeare, who wrote "Henry the Fifth."

MRS. SCANLON AND PIKE 'SOUL-MATES'

Dance Student

George D. Pike, millionaire business man, made daily visits to the dance studio of Mrs. Maude E. Scanlon, it was testified by Thomas A. Scanlon in his alienation suit yesterday.

UNHAPPY LIVES DREW THEM TOGETHER

Trips to theaters and night clubs with George D. Pike, her wealthy 67-year-old dancing pupil, and long talks with him about their "mutually unhappy home life," were admitted by Mrs. Maude E. Scanlon in a deposition read in Suffolk Superior Court today at trial of her husband's $100,000 alienation suit against Pike.

Mrs. Scanlon, who formerly taught dancing and bridge in the Back Bay, is now a professional bridge teacher in New York with a fashionable clientele. Her husband Thomas A. Scanlon, conducts a Back Bay dance studio.

According to her deposition, Pike told her he was very lonely, and she told how blue and unhappy she was.

She met him sometimes by appointment at hotels, and on various occasions went to the Elks Hotel, the Lido Venice, Cocoanut Grove, the theaters, the Square and Compass Club on Beacon st. Once they made a trip to a tearoom at Marshfield, chaperoned by his chauffeur.

TOLD HER HUSBAND

Pike, she asserted, lent her $500, to start a tearoom. She said she told her husband about the trips "because I knew a lot of people and they would have told if I didn't."

The deposition was read by Scanlon's attorney, Harry F. R. Dolan. At the start of it she told of making repeated efforts to have her husband drop his suit against Pike. ... ignored her.

She said she ignored him when he begged her to drop her divorce suit. Regarding her friendship with Pike, the questions in the deposition related to the period from Oct. 1, 1927, to March, 1928, when she and her husband separated.

FOUR TIMES A WEEK

"I saw Mr. Pike four times a week in business, he being a dancing and bridge pupil, the dancing in private and the bridge lessons in classes," she testified. "The bridge hour was over at 10:30 p. m. Occasionally I went with him to dinner at that hour.

"I enjoyed his company and it was part of my business to go to the theatre with him. The time we went to the Peacock Inn at Marshfield was due to frequent mention I had made of wishing to purchase a tearoom business.

"Mr. Pike said he would be glad to lend me the money and I said it would take about $500.

"The day we went to Marshfield we returned to Boston in the early evening and dined at the Elks' Hotel, after which we danced all the evening. That was the first time I was alone with him.

UNDERSTOOD EACH OTHER

"Mr. Pike was kind and courteous, always very happy to take me places. He told me he was a very lonely man and enjoyed my company and would take me anywhere. It was an understood thing if I had time we would go out together.

"On another occasion he said he would give anything to go out with me, as he was so lonely."

Asked if she spent all her free time with Pike, she replied:

"Don't say all my free time, because I had so little."

"Most of your free time?" she was asked.

"Yes," she said. "Except for Sundays."

Soldiers Find Life at Home Boring

What Has Gone Before

Ernst who enlisted as a schoolboy, tells the post-war story of a group of war comrades who march home when peace is declared. They reach their home city in a pouring rain, puzzled and disconcerted by the alien world which meets them after years in the trenches. Ernst finds a barrier between himself and his family. He has changed—yet they treat him as if he were still a schoolboy.

Now Go on With the Story

"Be careful, Ernst, that no harm comes to you out there," she calls after me.

"But what harm could come to me at home here, Mother, in peace time?" I say smiling, and looking up at her.

... that has been between ... but phantasm and dream.

VISITS COMRADE

But the light of the lamp concentrates to a flashing point in the buckle of my belt. The moment has passed. I am no child; I am wearing a uniform. Quickly I run down the ... three steps at a time ...

... a long time. He ...

"Hello, Hans, fit again?" I say heartily. "How goes it? Nothing like being up on your pins again, eh?"

... bursts into sobs and goes out. Albert makes me a sign with his eyes. I look around mystified. Then I noticed a pair of crutches lying beside Hans' chair. "Not finished with yet?" I ask.

"Oh, yes," he replies. "Came out of hospital last week." He reaches for the crutches, lifts himself up and with two jerks swings across to the stove. Both feet are missing ...

"I didn't know, Hans," I say.

ONLY HIS FEET

He nods. His feet were frost-bitten in the Carpathians, then gangrene set in, and in the end they had to be amputated.

"Think heaven, it is only his feet," says Frau Trosske, bringing a cushion and setting it under the artificial limb. "Never mind, Hans, we will soon put it right; you'll soon learn to walk again." She sits down beside him and strokes his hands.

"Yes," I say, only to say something, "you still have your legs, anyway."

"That's what I say," he answered.

I offer him a cigarette. What should one do at such moments?—Everything seems brusque, however well it is meant. We talk a while, halting and painfully, but whenever Albert or I get up and move about we see Hans watching our feet with a greedy, anguished ... and his mother's eyes following ... in the same direction ...

Occasionally the personal element was injected into the conversation. Have I got to answer that question? I think it is a private matter and I don't see any reason why I should answer.

"Well, we spoke about our mutual unhappy home life—that will answer everything. My home life was very unhappy and Mr. Pike knew it. I can't go into his conversations; they were too involved, for we talked for hours.

"Some of the time I wouldn't say anything to him but just be blue and unhappy. He would say 'It is a pity' or 'It's a shame.' Just what anyone would say in a sympathetic manner.

PITIES HER UNHAPPINESS

"Two or three times I told him I was contemplating divorce. He said for many years his home life has been unhappy and nothing could be done about it.

"I told him I didn't quite believe in divorce and I didn't believe in the modern-day laxity. He said it was a pity that a woman of my type should be unhappy.

"I was very frank with my husband and told him I went out with Mr. Pike. And that started a row. I know quite a few people and if I didn't tell him, other people would."

Marry-Go-Round

WHEN MEN DRIVE WOMEN TO USING HENNA

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE GREATEST cross which the average woman has to bear in this life is the torment of waiting for a letter from the man she loves!

A [illegible] have a Scotch conscience about everything [illegible]. He may pay his bills the moment they are due, settle his obligations on the spot, and [illegible] a borrowed BOOK or an UMBRELLA.

HELEN ROWLAND

He may even be honest about making out his income-tax report. He may even tell the truth about his golf score! He may even refuse to lie to the woman he LOVES!

* * *

But he will never be [illegible]

[illegible] At the very thought of [illegible]

He may know that his mother's heart is aching for news of him, that his wife is almost on the verge of nervous prostration for fear that something has happened to him, or that some girl is weeping all the mascara off her eyelashes in the belief that she is "forgotten."

And yet he will put off writing "until tomorrow!"

And, when tomorrow comes, he'll probably rush out—and telegraph!

A woman REVELS in spilling her thoughts and emotions all over notepaper; but the very sight of a pen paralyzes a man so that he HASN'T any thoughts—and his only emotion is acute [illegible].

With a hundred interesting things to tell he has to INVENT something to say, in order to cover four sides of a small sheet of paper. When he begins describing the scenery to you, you may know how he is SUFFERING.

Every letter that a woman writes is a joy and an inspiration. Every letter that a man writes is a mental abortion and reads like a "forced confession" at the end of the third degree.

And then, nine times out of ten, when he has finished it in sweat and agony, he will stick it in his pocket and forget to MAIL it!

And some hapless woman will keep wearing out the hall rugs, going to the front door to look for it, for another long week!

up with him. She does not see that Albert is suffering under it. No one could stand that for long.

"Albert, we ought to be going along to report now," I say, to give him a pretext for escape.

"Yes," he says eagerly.

Once outside we begin to breathe again. The night reflects softly on the wet pavement. Street lights flicker in the wind. Albert stares straight ahead. There's nothing I can do about it, he begins [illegible] when I [illegible] between [illegible] and see him and his mother in the end [illegible] to feel as if it were a [illegible] [illegible]

It is always so with comfort.

TO FIND WILLY

We go to find Willy. His room is a wilderness. The bed has been dismantled and stands upended against the wall. It has to be made larger. Willy has grown so much in the army that he does not fit it any more. Planks, hammers, saws lie strewn all about. And on a chair there [illegible] an immense dish of potato salad. He is not there himself. His mother explains that he has been out in the scullery a whole hour, scrubbing himself clean.

Frau Homeyer [illegible] on her knees before Willy's pack, [illegible] through it. Shaking her head [illegible] were once a pair of [illegible]. Dreadful holes!" she murmurs, looking up at Albert and me disapprovingly.

"Cheap stuff," I said with a shrug.

"Cheap indeed," she protests bitterly. "Shows how little you know about it! It's the best wool, let me tell you, young man. Eight days I was running up and down before I got it. And now see! Through already! And you won't find their like anywhere."

She contemplates the ruins with an aggrieved air. "I'm sure there must have been time at the war just to pull on a pair of clean socks quickly at least once a week." Four pairs of them he had [illegible] he went out. [illegible]

CHICKEN FOR DINNER

I am just about to take up his defense when he himself enters in triumph announcing at the top of his voice,

"There's a piece of luck for you. Another aspirant for the Order of the Dixie. There's going to be fricassed chicken tonight, lads."

[illegible]

Willy swings the creature to and fro blissfully. Frau Homeyer [illegible] up and utters a shriek. "Willy! But where did you get it from?"

Oscar, the [illegible] in a broken voice. [illegible]—He has killed Binding's pedigree cock!

"Binding! What Binding?" asks Willy.

The cock belongs to Binding, the milkman next door. Oh, how could you do such a thing?" Frau Homeyer sinks down on a chair.

"I wasn't going to leave a good roast like that just running about," says Willy in astonishment, "not when I had him as good as in my hand already."

See her smile as she passes her needle in and out of the soft cloth. I wonder if she's thinking of the baby jacket she made for her first boy, years and years ago, when she and Fritz were young and danced the Strauss waltzes together?"

"I believe they do look happier than we do, when you come to think of it," we said to each other. And then we hurried back to the hotel, for one of us had an engagement for a face massage and the other was having her hair touched up a bit and the third had to try on a new reducing corset—for we were none of us awfully young, and what would our friends at home say if we came back from Europe looking our ages and acting the way we look?

Pork Dishes for Crisp, Cool Days

By MARTHA LEE.

FINE, SAVORY pork is always delicious, but it's most enjoyable when the days grow crisp and cool.

Martha Lee

We've talked a good deal about using care in selecting our fresh pork and now let's be equally particular about cooking it.

First, I want to give you a recipe for Baked Pork Chops that may sound like a little work since the chops are split, stuffed and skewered together with toothpicks, but are they worth the trouble? The family choruses, Yes."

BAKED PORK CHOPS

- 6 rib chops
- 1 cup fine bread crumbs
- 4 tbsps. minced celery
- 1 tbsp. butter
- 1 tbsp. minced onion
- 1 tbsp. minced parsley
- 1-8 tsp. poultry seasoning
- ¼ tsp. salt
- Pepper
- 1-8 tsp. celery seed

Cook the onion, celery and parsley in butter for a few minutes. Add the bread crumbs and seasonings and stir until well mixed. Cut a pocket in each chop. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper and rub lightly with flour. Sear the chops in a heavy, hot skillet, browning the fat edges first. Fill each chop with the dressing and skewer the edges together with toothpicks. Lay the stuffed chops on a rack in a covered pan. Cover closely and bake in a moderate oven for about 45 minutes or until the chops are tender. Remove toothpicks and serve at once.

PORK CHOPS WITH SPINACH

Purchase six shoulder pork chops. Dredge with flour and season with salt and pepper. Sear both sides; reduce the heat and cook 30 minutes. Put a layer of hot cooked spinach in a casserole, and arrange the chops on top. Have ready 1½ cups thin white sauce and just as you remove it from the fire, add two beaten egg yolks to it. Pour sauce over chops and spinach and sprinkle liberally with grated cheese. Place in a hot oven or under broiler flame to melt and slightly brown the cheese.

BARBERRY JELLY

Take as many apples by measure as you have barberries, say 7 qts. of each; remove any spots, quarter and core the apples, but do not pare them. Put the berries with the apples in your preserving kettle, add water to cover to top of fruit; boil until the apple are soft, then strain through a jelly bag without squeezing. Put the juice on to boil 20 minutes, measure juice. Add an equal quantity of sugar, boil until it will jell—usually about 5 or 10 minutes. Delicious with cold meat of fowl.—Mrs. E. La Bossiere, 54 Moulton st., Lynn.

Daily True Story

The Fleet Is in

"THE FLEET'S in!"

Mighty battlewagons, swift cruisers, sleek destroyers, a supply ship or two, at anchorage in Man o' Wars row. Under the shadow of San Francisco's main hi[illegible]

A week of shore liberty in the port. Launches, loaded to the gunwhales, coming ashore. Groups of sailors filtering uptown. San Francisco opening wide its doors from the Embarcadero to Powell st. out to Twin Peaks and up on Nob Hill.

He had danced three times this evening with Laura Wentworth. After that he had not cared to dance with any other girl, being content to stand in the doorway watching her lithe movements.

In the afternoon she had been his companion on a sight-seeing tour of the city. Out through Golden Gate Park, around the cliffs above the Presidio and Lincoln Park, overlooking the Golden Gate and Marin's purple hills . . . he had scarcely noted these, so engrossed had he been with the chattering girl by his side.

FALLEN HARD FOR HER

The day had been climaxed with a supper and dance in the Wentworth home atop Nob Hill. In the morning he'd be back on the ship; back aboard the Colorado after a glorious seventy-two hours leave.

In those three days . . . Bert smiled, again deep in his thoughts despite Dave Watson's continued persiflage. In those three days he knew he had fallen hard for Laura. At the same time he was conscious of the futility of hoping to aspire to the daughter of one of San Francisco's biggest shipping owners.

And yet there was something in her manner and speech when they were together, that raised his hopes to the highest.

"Chances are when we weigh anchor, she'll forget all about me, he mused. Hopefully he told himself she would not.

Later, while the orchestra was still playing, they were together again. Without a spoken word they had wandered outdoors.

It was a rare July night, warm and balmy. At their feet a thousand electric signs danced and glittered downtown.

But Laura eluded his arms. "I'm sorry, Bert, but you should know it's—impossible! I didn't think that you'd—"

"I'm sorry!" Bert said shortly. "I thought perhaps you might care for me just a little."

"I might, Bert," she said softly, repressing a sigh, "if things were different. But under the circumstances . . . Well, you can understand, can't you."

VISION STILL REMAINS

And Bert did understand. Regretfully he led her back into the room filled with its dancing sailors and brightly garbed girls.

It was the [illegible] afternoon the Colorado was open to visitors. The rest of the squadron had already slipped out of the bay bound for other ports. On the morrow the Colorado would weigh anchor and head north.

A vision of her dark brown hair deep blue eyes and smiling mouth remained in his memory to haunt him along with her cheery laughter and gay chatter.

Without warning his musings were interrupted by the sound of her voice. He had not noticed in his reverie, that the launch had come alongside.

"You don't seem very pleased to see me again," Laura said.

"I didn't know you were coming aboard," he responded, wondering why she had come. In her arms was a furry black mass that resolved itself into a half-grown Skye terrier.

"It wasn't my idea," Laura explained. "Some of the girls thought they'd like to come out and so—so I came along."

She stooped and put the puppy down. Welcoming its freedom the terrier scampered along the deck.

"Not too far, McTavish!" she called chidingly. "That's really not its name," she informed Bert, "but Dad will persist in calling it that just to tease me."

IN HE GOES FOR THE DOG

[illegible]

[illegible] and sailors rushed across the deck, following a [illegible] of terror. There was a faint splash overside. Running to the rail Bert saw a struggling black haired terrier pawing the green waters of the bay.

"Oh, Bert, it's MacTavish!"

It didn't need Laura's agonized exclamation to tell him it was her little terrier. He had vaulted the rail before Laura divined his intention. She grasped his arm, but he shook himself loose.

"Bert, don't, please!"

But he had already hit the water 50 yards from the dog. In that brief moment he had seen that the launch was already a quarter of a mile away, headed back to shore. There were none of the others any nearer. If he [illegible]

With long, powerful strokes he quickly narrowed the distance [illegible] Laura stood watching.

When he stood before her again and held out a bedraggled little terrier she grasped both Bert's shoulders despite his dripping clothing.

"Oh, Bert, you shouldn't have done that," she reproached gently. "But I love you for it," she added naively.

He smiled uncomfortably at her praise. "You couldn't expect me to stand by and—"

"No," she said quietly. "I couldn't expect you to do anything else but what you did, Bert!" And, despite the grinning group that surrounded them, she pulled his head down and kissed him.

Investigations are being made concerning nutrition in its relation to the development of the body.

There is no reason why similar studies in adult life cannot be made. They should be, because a study of the figures shows that premature deaths occur most frequently among the grown-up.

This is due [illegible] neglect of persons of this age. But whatever the reasons may be, chronic diseases of adults have actually [illegible]. Such conditions as high blood pressure, kidney disease and heart disease still take a tremendous toll of the population. It is hoped that science will make such progress as to result in a marked reduction in such diseases.

FOOTBALL LINE PLAY 'UNKNOWN' TO SPECTATORS

FANNING

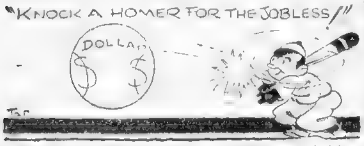
--By GEORGE UNDERWOOD--

Today Is the Day. Wigwam, the Place. Answer the Roll. | C'Mon! Be a Sport! Braves vs. Red Sox. Help Job Hunters.

LET'S ALL GO OUT TO THE BALL GAME

Let's go out to the ball game, the city crown to decide,
Walloping Waldoc, the Earl of Two Base, will give the apple a ride.
Deacon MacFayden may join in a duel with Brandt, Braves' pitching ace—
Let's temporarily forget both our teams are far out of reach of first place—
Make believe it's a World Series! Turn out in a World Series mob!
Knock a home run with your dollars, By Gum! For the guys who are out of a job!

For the guys who are out of a job—that's what today's game is for, fellows. [illegible] If any [illegible] prohibit [illegible] then we will be a pretty poor sport [illegible]. It's a poor sport who can't help a [illegible] there's enough of us down nowadays [illegible] of employment. You'll always find "bums" and weaklings out of work. The men out of work today are not bums or weaklings. Many of them are the most able, efficient in their trade or profession. Give 'em a hand! Stop talking about how you would like to help 'em—and help them! Be a regular feller! Close up your desk, leave your bench if you can and hit the trail for Braves Field and the city championship game between the Red Sox and Braves. Knock a home run with your dollars, By Gum, for the guys who are out of a job!"



Babe Ruth and his teammate, Lou Gehrig, are clinched in a death grapple for home run honors. The last few days will decide it. Ball players say the odds are in favor of the Bambino. "Opposing pitchers are not goin' to groove 'em for the Babe," quoth one of the players in a fanning bee the other night, "but they'll not make it as tough for Babe as they will for Lou. They know how much Ruth has done for baseball. They know that the salary he is getting helps keep up the salaries all over the league. When Ruth's [illegible] out of big [illegible] salaries will drop also. We're rooting for Babe to stay at the top as long as he can or until another Behemoth of Swat comes along to take his place."

How about Gehrig, himself?" we queried. "He's hitting within a few points of the Babe and at this point is a homer ahead. Isn't Larruping Lou about ready to step into Babe's shoes?"

Gehrig has no color," was the answer. "Somehow or other he doesn't attract the fans. There is only one Babe Ruth."

There you have the ball players' own idea of Babe Ruth. It also is the magnates from the salary Jake Ruppert is paying him. Also the fans, from the way they storm the the gates whenever, wherever he plays. Would that the Babe himself could be put on as an added attraction at the Unemployment Game at Braves Field this afternoon. The name, Babe Ruth, is worth a lot of money.

[illegible] Ernie Schaaf [illegible] he's back [illegible] against little men the next [illegible] will be Gerald Ambrose "Tuffy" Griffith hitting the floor. The Wrentham Dynamiter has been blasting the big 'uns out of their brogans. What'll he do against the little 'uns? Just as good, say we. That old wallop of Ernie's seems unable to recognize any difference in size or color. He knocks 'em all bowlegged, be they large or small, white, yellow or green.

Ernie serves them body socks a la mode de Dempsey. He pounds 'em in the breadbasket until they double up and poke their chins within range. Then—Whang! It's all over! The little fellows are harder to reach about the body. The mental edge will be Schaaf's. Boston is bad medicine to Griffith. Just when the Chicagoan was headed to the heights along came old Jack Gagnon to knock Tuffy cuckoo. M'seu Gagnon scarcely has won a fight since. The surprise of knocking out Tuffy apparently overcame him. But ever since Boston Jack Gagnon knocked him out Tuffy has been suspicious of everything Bostonese.

Unless Eddie Mays gets busted up as he did last season, it begins to look as if he was the Harvard man Old Eli has most to fear when November rolls around. Eddie is winging around the end and knifing through the line in mid-season form . . . Al Mamaux has made such a hit piloting the Newark Bears that the former Brooklyn pitcher has received two major league managerial offers. Besides being a great manager, Al sings a wicked tenor. He goes on the R. K. O. circuit soon . . . Rabbit Maranville and Bruce Cunningham of the Braves and Tom Oliver of the Red Sox will be among the big leaguers who soon will leave on a baseball trip to the Orient.

Besides Maranville, Cunningham and Oliver the players who will invade Japan are Al Simmons, Lefty Grove and Mickey Cochrane of the Athletics, Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals, Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, Willie Kamm of the Indians, Lefty O'Doul of the Robins, Larry French of the Pirates and Muddy Ruel of the Tigers. Two minor leaguers, George Kelly of Minneapolis and Ralph Shindle of Buffalo, will go along as utility men . . . If Lou Brouillard and Andy Callahan only will do as much fighting inside the ring as their managers are doing outside of it, what a perfectly lovely scrap it will be!

Says doughty manager of Callahan, "I'll hand you a sock on the beak!"
Says Brouillard's scrappy pilot, "Your nose I'm about to tweak!"
If only Louis and Andy will say it with wallops in the ring.
Like pilots talk fight on the outside, what joy to us fans they will bring!

[illegible] at the [illegible] estimate [illegible] be bolstered by 10,000 more [illegible] baseball fan [illegible] charitable tribute. [illegible] the Braves and [illegible] are bitter rivals and no bitter [illegible] either more than [illegible] They [illegible] but not since [illegible] spring when they clashed twice. The Sox won both games and the Braves claimed it was a fluke. Now the rivals won't even [illegible] the same side of the street.

Brandt to Oppose MacFayden on Mound

[illegible] Braves have been [illegible] repeatedly of late and have [illegible] from fifth to seventh place.

They have one more chance for consolation—beating the Red Sox. [illegible] want to so as to [illegible] the [illegible] one thing [illegible] about to lift them out of the depression they have been in since the Tribe took to the toboggan.

Danny MacFayden and Ed Brandt will be the pitchers. They started a duel in one of those games last spring. Both worked three innings. In those three frames the Sox got nothing but a foul off Brandt while Deacon Danny let the Braves down with one hit.

Brandt arrived home ahead of the rest of the Braves to get plenty of sleep and rest and is ready for a masterful performance. MacFayden has rested since Saturday and will be at his best. Brandt has won 18 games for the Braves this year, and MacFayden has copped 16 for the Sox.

Red Sox Are 5 to 4 Choice to Conquer

The Red Sox will be 5-4 favorites. That's because they've hoisted themselves out of the cellar for the first time since 1924 and are now playing brilliant ball.

Here is a list of what is going to happen at Braves Field today:

1—Relay race—Red Sox (Rothrock, Sweeney, Warstler and Reeves) vs Braves (Berger, Neun, Richbourg, Urbanski). Timers: A. A. U. officials.

2—Sale of three balls, at home plate, first base and third base. Balls autographed by Babe Ruth, Earl Webb and Mayor Curley.

3—Use of National League ball for 4½ innings and American League ball for 4½ innings.

4—Two umpires from each league—working without pay.

5—Champion fungo hitting contest.

6—Plenty of music.

Oliver Unlikely to Play Today

There is but one holdback that seems to be marring a perfect day. Tommy Oliver won't play. Oliver sprained his ankle yesterday. He'll be laid up for two days at least. Oliver was pleading with doctors [illegible]

[illegible] Webb [illegible] Webb [illegible] one double today.

There should be a plethora of dead grandmothers and sundry illnesses today—both among office [illegible] and office managers.

BASEBALL LOSES A MILLION

New York, Sept. 23 (INS). Gate receipts in the National League for 1931 shrunk more than $1,000,000 as compared with 1930. And 1930 wasn't a boom year, either.

The admission was made by one of the high officials of the circuit who asked that his name be deleted from the quotation.

"The attendance is off at least 20 per cent, as compared with 1930," he said. "It may reach around 25 per cent. The slump can be attributed to the depression for one thing and to the runaway race the Cardinals made as reason No. 2."

In 1930 the league played to 5,500,000 cash patrons. Based on [illegible] per cent [illegible] than 4,000,000. And the cash difference, based on an average of 75 cents per head, will click over $1,000,000.

WHAT'S THE KICK ABOUT?

Well, you see the University of Dayton football coach thought they were off in the kicking department. So he hired pretty LOIS HARPER, a dancing instructor, to show the boys something. Here is LOIS showing FLOYD EVANS, the Dayton star, the right way to hoist his tootsy. Now they've canned Lois. It seems she stopped the scrimmaging. The boys wanted to study form.

HARVARD SQUAD CUT TO 41

Coach Eddie Casey cut the Harvard varsity squad to 41 players today.

Ten erstwhile varsity players went over to Jimmy Knox's second varsity squad, while one scrub was promoted to varsity ranks.

Warren A. Casey, a sophomore center candidate, was boosted into the varsity ranks. His fine showing in three recent scrimmages won him the promotion.

Seven ends were retained on the varsity. They are Red Record, Leon Francisco, Jerry Cassedy, Jack Healey, Carl Hageman, Vahan Moushegian and Tom Nazro.

Among the guard candidates who escaped Casey's axe were Jim Esterley, Bill Ginman, Isaac Hatter, [illegible] Myerson, Herb McLeas, Eudy Rogers and George Talbot.

Only Four Centers Retained on Squad

Casey made only slight changes in his list of backfield candidates. The Harvard head mentor retained 16 ball carriers and signal barkers.

SPECTACULAR, RATHER THAN GOOD WORK, OFTEN WINS FAME FOR INDIVIDUAL

Harvard Head Coach and All-American Star

Eddie Casey will write [illegible] article for the Boston Evening American [illegible] Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

The play in [illegible] so far [illegible] spectators are [illegible] of what goes on [illegible] in the center [illegible] of the tackle of [illegible] cannot be seen [illegible] particular touch. It [illegible] that every [illegible] comes to the fore [illegible] may be playing [illegible] this star [illegible] his prominence by other [illegible] than good football.

A [illegible] many times from [illegible] particular [illegible] very broad shoulders, very squat figure, unusually big in every way or unusually small, all of these things in themselves help single out players and make the crowd watch them. Again some [illegible] kickoff, or make themselves prominent by not wearing a headguard.

When a lineman gets prominence by any of these methods, [illegible] good line play that [illegible] One can sit in [illegible] hear such a play [illegible] tackle when in reality he was flat on his back after a poor [illegible]. Of course, the greater knowledge of football [illegible] of numbers [illegible] helping to get [illegible]

"Dumb," "Stupid" Are Line Misnomers

The term "dumb guard" or "stupid tackle" has never been justifiably used and is less true today than ever. Just as we found that centers have increasing burdens placed upon them, so the other linemen today are an important factor in every play of football game. Their job has only begun when they make the first charge across the line of scrimmage. Each man in the line carrying on his own battle of wits with his opponent, and the fate of the game often lies in one or the other being outguessed.

A guard in taking his position on offense at the start of the play, must be careful to be in a strong position from which he can be most effective, and at the same time he must be careful to hide his job on the coming play from any of the opposing team.

Often, in fact, in four out of five plays today one or the other guard is supposed to come out of his own line and swing around to form interference for the runner. His position must carefully disguise this fact as the defensive team is looking for any giveaway.

In order to form good interference for a speedy backfield runner, the guard himself must be speedy or the play loses all effectiveness. Hence we find lighter, faster guards on all teams, and the spectacle of Notre Dame, the strongest team in the country last year, depending on a guard, Metzger, who weighed only 15[illegible] pounds. Such guards are well able to take care of themselves against far heavier opponents because they move faster and use their hands more effectively.

Metzger not only protected himself, but even invited extra pressure by his steady line of chatter directed at his opponent. In one game the story [illegible] in a giant guard opposite and grabbed his feet whenever he attempted to pull out [illegible] interference.

When the guard pulls out of his line to sweep into interference, he leaves a job for all of his mates to do. If the line is unbalanced [illegible] to take care of his own position and also cover the hole left by the interfering guard. To do this he must perform some of the side blocks or Indianizing combination blocks that linemen learn in early season.

Center and Tackle Must Close Up Gap

If the line is balanced the center and tackle must close up the [illegible] also drop out and [illegible] picking off any opposing linemen [illegible]

[illegible]

In the case of [illegible] will be seen interfering out of the line almost as much as the guards and many teams select their tackles for this ability. But the chief duty of the tackle on offense is to head the focal point of most plays of [illegible]

[illegible] tackle smash and [illegible]

On of the prettiest duels in football is that [illegible] between the defensive tackle on one side and the offensive end and back on the other side. Where a team is using a wing back formation on offense, the spectator will find it well worth his while to watch this battle of wits and power. The end will try to maneuver the

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I met Gene Buckley, the Iron Man of boxing in Massachusetts, coming out of his office in the State House.

"How's boxing?" I asked.

"Just as good as the attraction offered to the public," answered Buckley. "I find that the ring game is in a healthier condition in Massachusetts than in any other state.

Mr. Boston

"The fans here know the game and will always turn out for a first class attraction. I look for some capacity crowds at the shows during the indoor season.

"This fellow Ernie Schaaf has helped create new interest in boxing. He is aggressive and has a terrific punch. Just now I don't think Schaaf fears any heavyweight in the world.

"The commission has tried to do its part in restoring interest in boxing. It has warred on one-sided matches, and has driven the fakers out of the game."

I believe that the high standing of boxing in Massachusetts is due to the excellent ... [illegible]

Gene Buckley has carried the burdens of the Massachusetts Commission. He has been the one to take the rap when things have not gone well, while he has received but scant praise. Persons in positions of authority should never expect praise. This is particularly true in the boxing game where there are numerous factions. It is impossible to satisfy all parties concerned.

The Springfield Case

[illegible]

Massachusetts referees have also exercised excellent judgment in stopping one-sided bouts. They don't permit boxers to take unnecessary lickings once it is apparent they are outclassed.

You will usually find that the fellow who has the boxing fathers on the pan has some private axe to grind. Boxing is in a pretty healthy condition in Massachusetts. Let's keep it that way.

State Gridmen Set

B. U. BACKS IN NEED OF WORK TOGETHER

Boston University's coaching staff is still far from satisfied with the team as the Saturday opener with Williams approaches. The first eleven is ragged in many spots and the mentors have plenty of work ahead for the next three days.

Team Is "Fair," Says Coach Mahaney

Coach Mahaney this morning said that the team was fair, ... plenty of faults. That is to be expected from a head coach and ... material was fair ...

Al Marsters said: "The team is much better than last year and if I can get my four regular backs together today and tomorrow, they will show Williams a few things."

EX-CHAMPION TO BE TESTED BY LIVAN

By JACK CONWAY

Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion of the world who recently once more heard the sound of the old five gong has been signed to meet Willie Young Livan, Italian middleweight, in a ten-round bout at an Arcadian A. A. card at the Arena on Sept. 30.

Leonard has been training for his comeback in secret in Newark and New Haven. He has been seen only by the boys he is training.

Livan is a veteran with pounds of smoke. He is a tough one for Leonard's first fight since he

Seeks Sparring Partners to Aid Brouillard

Lynch and Goldman in Bout at Providence

5 Heavyweights Enter St. Joe's Tourney

There is no fee to enter the heavyweight golf tournament at the Oakley Country Club, according to the announcement in the night sports bulletin, as reported and Dr. Lloyd Aldrich is donating the cups of two-round and one-round winners.

Other entries include Tim Mara, the last of the Mohicans, and all the rest of the Giants. Tim has had no match since he defeated Jack Dempsey, who failed to show up for the second game.

$8 on Crusaders' Training Table List

Holy Cross football players have been selected for training by Coach M. Davis. The training table group does not include any of the men who were dropped by the coach, but it does include a number of those who have been given a chance to make the team.

Manager Dan Shea has announced that the training table will be in charge of Steward Joseph Hurley, who will be assisted by Mrs. Hurley and a staff of waitresses.

Ratos Players Hurt

Two members of the Ratos baseball team are in the hospital with injuries received in the game with the Boston Braves last Sunday. Jack Kelly, first baseman, received a cut lip and Jack Hamilton, pitcher, had a finger broken.

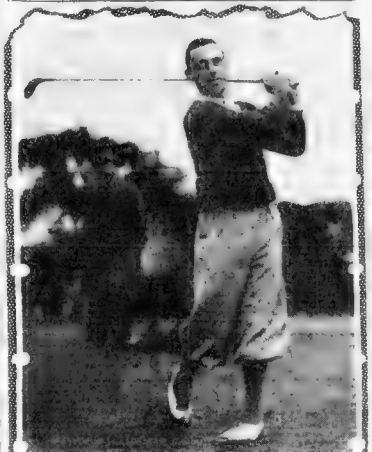
SPORTS REEL



Henry Ciuci, of Mill River, Ct., is one of the New England pros who has a good chance in the $3000 title golf at Wollaston. Ciuci has a 119 total for 36 holes, four shots back of the leaders. After a tough first round, Henry carded 72 yesterday to draw up. Two good rounds and maybe the first $1000 will be his. A grand is quite a prize this season. Int'l Photos

Mighty Mite On Ice! Yale football hopes we're chilled today by the news that great little Albie Booth, Yale football captain, has a trick appendix which must be frozen every few days to avert an operation. Now it seems that Albie will play only for brief periods. He avoided an operation for fear it would weaken him.

The Daily Dozen

By M. T. McSWEENEY

The 144-pound Booth is threatened with the loss of his appendix which would take his weight down to 143 3-36 pounds, or should I consult the family physician?

When you give an Irishman a club there's nothing in the rules to prevent him hitting his opponent over the conk with it. Anything is apt to happen.

Prima Camera seemed injure in any auto crash last night and it again proves that miracles can happen. One pane for flying glass which had a great target, but missed.

In fact, the driver of the other car claims Prime had his feet out the window there was no room inside for them) and he thought there were two Austins coming and tried to go between them.

Glenna Collett Vare was having quite a time winning her match in the women's national golf until she found a four leaf clover. I always knew that golf was a game of luck. When a two-footer misses. It's blasphemy.

Locally there'll be no games cancelled for that reason. The weather has been so warm that all the B. C., B. U., Harvard and Tufts gridmen are down for five. They looked like Paul Whiteman when they started, but now they'd pass for goalposts or columnists.

Robins Take Verdict

St. Louis Sept. 23 (AP)—A jury of fans today found Burleigh Grimes and some ready lungs enabled the Robins to get a 6 to 5 verdict over the Cards. The first "mop up" pitching was turned in by John Picus Quinn.

B. C. TEAM FIT FOR C. U. TILT SATURDAY

Boston College's football squad is working hard and is rounding into shape for the opening game with Centre College at Fenway Park Saturday afternoon. Coach Frank Leahy has his charges working out twice daily.

Two tackles are Bill Bennett and Phil Cuniff. The tackle positions and field frontier where the two starters have not won out over Romanowski and Eyman.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Rails resumed their position of upside leadership on the big exchange today, with heavy short covering effecting some substantial advances. Delaware & Hudson and Union Pacific furnished initial leadership with large advances followed by other rails that were heavily hammered in recent months.

Gossip of Relief Heard in Wall St.

While no definite decision has been reached by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Wall Street today heard much gossip about the size of prospective rate increases. Some insisted that rail wage cuts would follow those by U. S. Steel and General Motors. Many doubt if wage cuts would accompany granting of a freight rate increase.

Favorites at Head of Second Advance

[illegible] advances in the favorite issues were well retained in the second period. After a profit taking dip in the leaders the market forged ahead to new high levels on the move with U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric and other favorites leading the way upward.

Lifting of Ban on Selling by Shorts

The Board of Governors of the New York Stock Exchange today removed the ban on short selling which they clamped down just before the opening Monday to protect stocks from the first panicky consequences of Monday's depressing news from Great Britain.

Short Interest Estimates Vary

Estimates varied sharply on the reduction in the size of the short interest following the Stock Exchange order temporarily prohibiting such transactions after today. Some figure the bear account has been cut at least 35 per cent, while others made the decrease much steeper. Canvass of a few important houses, however, disclosed that practically no borrowing demand existed for certain stocks which commanded a premium only a day or so ago. This suggested that the bear account in these particular issues had been pretty well eliminated.

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That the rescinding of the resolution adopted on Monday does not open wide the door labelled short selling. The exchange is still keeping tabs on the seller. Suspension of exchange rules, dealing specifically with demoralizing sales, is not expected until the governing committee is reasonably certain the threat of such sales is past.

Market Strategy

Assuming that powerful interests have allied themselves with the constructive side, it is quite possible they will fall back on a strategy calculated to strengthen the public confidence. If a measure of stability can be introduced to the price structure lasting until the first of the month it is quite possible developments at that time will be sufficiently optimistic to carry prices forward. At present great confidence is felt regarding the rail petition and the steel wage action is bullishly received in some quarters.

Tonnage of Reading may reflect more than an ordinary short squeeze. One large wire house believes the scale buying witnessed was for accounts friendly to Baltimore & Ohio. These purchases could easily be transferred to the carrier at a later date.

Allied Chemical

Advice to stay away from the chemical shares in particular Allied Chemical has often been reiterated here. Astute observers who supplied the information about Dutch selling now say this is completed and [illegible] time to modify previously held opinion. They feel the dividend of $6 is not only safe but likely to be covered and the equity is a purchase in the middle nineties. Buying of the group, however, must remain selective.

New York Stock Exchange by its courageous action and intelligent handling of a most difficult situation has won its way to the premier position among the important marts of the world.

STOCKS RALLY IN BOSTON

Stocks staged a vigorous rally in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange, [illegible] leading the way to higher levels. Gains ranged from 1 to [illegible] points or more with American Telephone and Edison Electric each advancing over 6 points.

New England Telephone was nearly 4 points higher. In the rail group Atchison gained 6, New Haven over 2 and Pennsylvania over 3. United Shoe was strong and gained over 4 points.

Gains of a point or better were shown for New England Public Service, General Electric, Torrington, United Fruit and American Woolen preferred.

Edison Electric soared over 6 points and General Capital was up 4. Boston & Maine shares were weak in the face of the rise and the prior preferred and D stamped issues were at new lows for the year.

Railroad Reports for August Given

New York, Sept. 23 (AP)—Several railroads reported today that August net operating income showed a decrease from the like month last year. Railroads reporting with comparative figures for August this year and 1930 follow: Delaware and Lackawanna for Aug. 1931, $460,252; Aug. 1930, $729,793. Soo Line for Aug. 1931, $155,721; Aug. 1930, $803,812. St. Louis and San Francisco for Aug. 1931, $1,081,401; Aug. 1930, $1,[illegible]

UNITED STATES SMELTING REFINING AND MINING COMPANY

The Directors of the United States Smelting Refining and Mining Company have declared a dividend of [illegible] cents per share on the Preferred Capital Stock, and a dividend of [illegible] cents per share on the Common Capital Stock, both payable on October 15, 1931, to stockholders of record at the close of business October 1, 1931.

F. W. BATCHELDER, Treasurer

RAILS LEADERS IN A NEW RISE IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 23—Railroad shares were leaders in a new sharp rise in Wall St. today, aided by heavy short covering. The market as a whole was aided by such factors as the lifting of the ban on short selling, with reports on short positions still required to block excesses, and the favorable tone shown on the re-opened London Stock Exchange.

News of the steel industry's wage cuts was also out of the way, removing a shadow from the market.

BRILLIANT RECOVERY

Share prices, particularly rails, were sent hurling upward in the most brilliant market recovery since the war debt moratorium of June as Exchange officials lifted the ban on short selling, once more providing a relatively free and open market, after two days of the most stringent control since the World War. Trading was confidently resumed in London, with a good effect both here and in Paris.

Many shares surged up 3 to 15 points. Price averages indicated an average gain of more than 4 points in leading issues by 1 p. m. Violent advances occurred in the rails, Atchison, Norfolk & Western, Union Pacific and Lackawanna sweeping up 10 to 15 points.

Such issues as American Telephone, New York Central, New Haven, American Tobacco "B," and Allied Chemical, gained 6 or more.

Issues selling up 4 or more included U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, American Can, Woolworth, National Biscuit and others. Trading was active. Some conservative brokers naturally regarded such an advance as too rapid.

STEEL WAGE CUTS

Wage reductions initiated in the steel industry, which may effect some 1,000,000 workers if generally accepted, and talk of reductions in railway wages which threatens the pay of some 1,300,000 workers, could not, of course, be regarded as of wholly favorable import, even by those bankers and economists who believe general wage revision must precede recovery.

While acknowledging that the immediate effects of such reductions may for a time curtail retail purchases of automobile, radio sets, and other important lines of merchandise, this school of thought, of which Albert H. Wiggin, head of the Chase National Bank, is a leading exponent, holds that measure is artificially to stem the tide of deflation which began running out two years ago have merely slackened and thus prolonged its flow.

Midweek business statistics again gave but faint clues to the expected autumn recovery. The steel trade reviews indicated a slight sag in steel ingot output. Iron Age placed output at 39 per cent of capacity, against 40 a week ago. This publication was inclined to take a pessimistic view of the prospect of an early pickup in automobile manufacturing.

The publication, Steel, pointed out to continued good demand for structural steel as somewhat encouraging. The freight car loadings were for the week of Labor Day, so not comparable with those of a year ago.

Hosiery Plants Are Booked to Capacity

New York, Sept. 23—Having orders booked calling for capacity operations at all five plants, Propper McCallum Hosiery Co., Inc., has stopped taking new accounts. It is limiting its sales to the 3000 customers already on its lists. This was made necessary by company's policy to sell only goods made in its own mills.

Orders on books will permit no let-up in plant operations for at least a month and daily volume of incoming business is such as to warrant maintaining maximum production of 10,000 dozen pairs of hosiery a week. All sales are being made at regular trade prices.

Wall St. Journal to Have New Home

A. L. Hartridge Company, Inc. has been awarded contract by The Wall Street Journal Building Company for the construction of a seven-story building at 44 Broad st., New York City. This building will be constructed from plans drawn by Lockwood Greene Engineers, Inc., will cover a plot of approximately 9,000 square feet, and upon completion will house the organization of Dow Jones & Company, Inc. and The Wall Street Journal.

Reassures Holders On Dividend Action

C. A. Dana, president of Spicer Manufacturing Co., in connection with the company's pending preferred dividend decision, declared it would be distributed. He said: "Next quarterly dividend on the preferred stock will be paid, but formal action is awaiting a quorum which will be gotten together in New York in a week or 10 days."

Mack Truck Gets Order for 50 Buses

Mack Truck, Inc., has been awarded an order from Brooklyn-Queens-Manhattan Transit Co. for 50 44-passenger street car buses. Production has already beed started.

Dollar volume of contract will amount to in excess of $500,000.

Electricity Sales Show an Increase

Public Service Electric & Gas Co., during the first seven months reports sales of electricity totaled 988,479,730 k.w.h., as against 972,173,634 in the like 1930 period.

PLAN APPROVED

Mrs. F. H., Medford—I am a widow, self-supporting. In a savings bank I have $4000, of which I want to invest $2000. Morris Plan certificates have been mentioned to me. What do you think of them?

Ans.—Operations of the Morris Plan, organized in 1914, are supervised by the State. The certificates, which pay 4½ per cent, are sound. If you invest $2000 you will get an annual income of $90. They may be cashed at any time on request.

JAZZ AGE DEBAUCH

(Gaston, Mo., Democrat)

"Mrs. Jack Orahood was given a delightful surprise, Thursday, when the ladies of the Pleasant Hour circle came, about 11:30, bringing well-filled baskets. The group entered the room singing 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here.' This was followed by the Victory yell. Mother Orahood then quoted scripture verses."

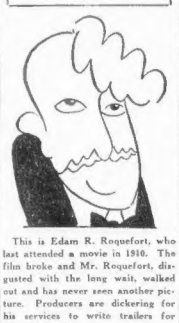
WHO'S WHO IN THE ART WORLD



This is Edam R. Roquefort, who last attended a movie in 1910. The film broke and Mr. Roquefort, disgusted with the long wait, walked out and has never seen another picture. Producers are dickering for his services to write trailers for their productions. They feel that he can use the words "stupendous," "super-tremendous" and "the year's greatest picture" without a trace of self-consciousness if he has never seen the film in question.

I have found in years of dealing
With women sensitive and feeling
That mostly woman's intuition
Is just old-fashioned, plain suspicion.

Great Britain's Problems

Trinidad, Colo., Sept. 23, 1931.

To the Editor, Boston Evening American:

The English government has speedily reached the pass which I thought they would reach.

The old-fashioned men who constitute the coalition government apparently have had no conception of the seriousness of the situation.

They took half-hearted measures or mistaken measures.

They cut the salaries of the teachers of the nation and of the defenders of that nation and immediately had a navy revolt on their hands.

They have not the courage to deal drastically with the dole, the SUPREME EVIL which is mainly responsible for bringing the country to its present condition.

They proposed merely a 10 per cent cut in the dole when they should have proposed at least a 25 per cent cut and should have limited the dole, as Germany has done, to supplying food for those who are in actual need.

A tariff impost of from 25 to 50 per cent on practically all imported articles would not only bring in a large income, but would do much to re-establish British industry. The tariff taxation, consequently, would be but little felt. But the proposed increase in income taxation constitutes a burden hardly to be borne by a nation already broken by excessive taxation.

Income taxation in England should be reduced and MUST BE REDUCED.

It is too great a burden on industry, and being concentrated on the enterprising and employing classes in a direct handicap to enterprise and employment, thereby affecting employes as well as employers.

In a word, the excessive income taxation hampers industry. The tariff would stimulate industry.

The dole is an unbearable burden which cannot continue.

What England needs is a government of men of modern thought with the competence to realize these facts and the courage to take the necessary vigorous action.

A conservative government would probably have Baldwin at its head. He is old-fashioned, too. But if progressive men like Beaverbrook and Rothermere were in the government, such government might be equal to the situation.

The suspension of specie payments is not disturbing, however, except as an evidence of a critical condition.

The inflation, due to the internal circulating of paper money, will be distinctly stimulating to business in Great Britain, and that stimulation will tend to revive industry and employment and to relieve the enterprising and creative classes from the unduly hampering restrictions and burdens of depression.

In other words, in good times an utterly inadequate specie currency is adequately enlarged and inflated by private paper.

In bad times this private paper is diminished by forced conservatism and by banking limitation, and, moreover, the specie currency in circulation is reduced by hoarding, so that a drastic contraction of the circulating media aggravates the depression, unduly burdens the borrowing classes and consequently restricts enterprise and reduces employment.

A certain amount of inflation over a limited period would be beneficial, not only in England, but elsewhere, especially as the practical total demonetization of silver throughout the world has made an extreme currency contraction everywhere.

As things exist today, the bankers run the finances of the world and run them in their own interest.

In an ideal situation the government should control finances in the interest of no particular class, but for the general good, and to meet varying conditions which arise.

(Signed) WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Gold Move May Help Trade

Great Britain's abandonment at least temporarily of the gold standard is a counter deflationary, or, if you will, an inflationary move.

William Randolph Hearst makes this clear in his comment on the historic move. The first part of Mr. Hearst's message, in which he alluded to the lack of progressivism in the British cabinet, which necessitated drastic action, was discussed on this page yesterday. In drawing his conclusions, which are printed above today, the publisher points out:

"The suspension of specie payments is not disturbing . . . the inflation due to the internal circulating of paper money will be distinctly stimulating to business in Great Britain and that stimulation will tend to revive industry and employment and to relieve the enterprising and creative classes from the unduly hampering restrictions and burdens of depression."

Inflation is of course a narcotic, and, unless administered with supreme restraint and vigilance, can readily defeat its own purposes.

Yet in the present overdeflated world, a moderate dose may well prove constructive, but of course, as Mr. Hearst has indicated, only if accompanied by economically sound attempts to balance the budget, reduce the impact of excessive income taxes, and eliminate non-essential governmental outlays.

The business significance of the suspension of the gold standard in Great Britian lies in the fact that the country, in the midst of stress and strain, creates for itself a closed monetary system, which is far more subject to domestic manipulation, control and management than the gold standard, which reflects international policies and decisions.

The new policy, born of necessity, constitutes a reversal of the deflationary, or contracting, program which since 1925 has weighed down British industry and diminished its relative place in the sun.

For the time being at least, the new monetary program removes the paralyzing effect in England of falling commodity prices and should give the stimulus of rising prices.

But, as Mr. Hearst has indicated, this tonic of monetary ease is beneficial only "over a limited period," and must be held in check by extremely wise financial administrators.

It is neither a cure-all nor a substitution for elimination of waste and inefficiency and other non-monetary factors which contributed to the waning of British prosperity.

Older Woman Worker

THE WORKING woman over forty—

HOW MUCH CHANCE HAS SHE AGAINST THE YOUNG, PRETTY GIRL WHO MAY NOT HAVE HALF AS MUCH SENSE BUT HAS ALL THE SCENERY?

Elsie Robinson

"She hasn't a chance!" thousands of discouraged, older women will cry. "The job ALWAYS goes to the young, pretty little fool, lazy and unreliable. And the older woman may be trained, steady and intelligent—but the tiny waist line and the unlined face win out."

That is what practically every older woman worker will tell you and that is what she honestly believes. But the Women's Bureau of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association didn't believe it. They had heard that statement countless times, but they felt there was a catch in it. So they decided to make a survey . . . scotch the boogie, if such it was.

It was a thorough survey, through all Illinois manufacturing concerns, and it accumulated mountains of reports. And, at the end of it, Miss Anne Hinrichson, director of the bureau announced that it proved that—

THE BEST JOBS GO TO THE OLDER WOMEN!

Which is going to be plenty of news to many a disgusted lady . . . and it's dollars to doughnuts that she won't believe it.

"The older woman worker," says Miss Hinrichson, "has a decided advantage where qualities of judgment, attention to detail, sustained perseverance and patience are required. WHERE SPEED IS REQUIRED THE YOUNGER WOMAN HAS THE BETTER OPPORTUNITY.

"Between the untrained older woman and the untrained girl the latter has the advantage. More than two-thirds of the applicants for jobs in factories are young girls, but of the older women who apply, a higher percentage are accepted, our survey shows.

"We find that beauty is practically non-essential, but the attractiveness of appearance which comes from good grooming is highly important. Good dressing, in the estimation of the employer, is neatness and suitability. Elaborate or expensive dressing has kept more women out of jobs than lack of clothes.

"WELL, STRONG WOMEN OF ALERT MINDS ARE PREFERRED OVER YOUNG GIRLS OF LOW PHYSICAL RESISTANCE."

"Then why can't I get a job?" cries desperate Widow Brown, home from her tenth day of fruitless tramping after a job. "I have all she says I should have. I'm neat and well groomed, I'm trained and dependable and still quick, and my mind's alert—if I'm not worried sick. Yet they turn me down every time and give the place to some little nitwi."

Yes, Widow Brown has most of the essentials. But, nine times out of ten, she has something else which discounts all her virtues and makes her a Total Loss as a worker.

"SELF-PITY AND DULL OR PESSIMISTIC ATTITUDES ARE THE WORST HANDICAP OF OLDER WOMEN," says Mrs. Hinrichson.

Not the bloom on the pretty face beside you, but the sneer and sag on your own face, lick you, sister.

New York Day by Day

Broadway Goes Afloat

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—Much of Broadway's cafe gaiety was transferred to trans-Atlantic liners, bolstering sagging receipts with week-end cruisers, this summer. Instead of speak-easy hooch in a hide-away humidity, passengers could have the real stuff along with the tang of fresh breezes.

While a number of such voyages were sedately respectable outings of parents with their children, a large percentage were wild orgies. They offered an elegant opportunity for hennaed and peroxided ladies and current sweet papas "to get away from it all."

The entertainment on the boats was in charge of a master of ceremony. Thus did a number of Broadway actors "at liberty" find temporary employment during a seasonal lull. It was their job to keep things whirling and according to reports they did with a whoop.

Some of the boats gave complimentary passage to cabaret, stage and radio performers to provide a celebrity tinge. There was one especial jaunt that may get backflare into first pages. Movies were taken of the high jinks for the news reels.

Two rather hilarious couples hiccupped out of the bar while cameras were at work. Not noticing the cameras but supposing it to be a revel on deck they joined in with a few monkey-shines, including a little drunken love making with wrestle holds.

The next week the wife of one of the gentlemen was at a movie when the news picture was shown. She thought it a case of double identity—her husband was on a fishing trip—and waited for the next show to see again. Then dashed out and brought the wife of her husband's fishing companion.

With the cut in Atlantic rates, the week-end cruises are likely to be abandoned. The slash has already stimulated travel abroad, so much so vessels assigned to such trips will be called back into regular trade. They were high jinks while they lasted.

It is possible that in ten years New York's elevated railroad, once a "blue chip" stock, will be a memory. With the coming of light under the glowering "els," has come expansion and opulence. Especially is this pronounced on Sixth ave. from 53d st. to 59th. Six years ago this shabbiest stretch in midtown, it now bristles with fine hotels, theaters, apartments and smart shops.

* * *

The blackest splotch under the "els" was the brass district in Allen st. The sun had not shone there for years until the structure was removed. Allen st. is already perking up and in a year or so will be fronting a sweeping boulevard. This is the first definite step to remove the sunless, airless and depressing spots known as New York slums.

* * *

Prowling in the neighborhood of Allen st., I came upon a group of gamins, smudgy and ragged, playing a sidewalk chalk game. Turning Gentleman Bountiful for the moment I inquired: "How would you boys like a nice big dish of ice cream?" A violently freckled red head teetered on one foot in his hop-scotching and replied: "What do we look like—beggars?" Uptown later in telling of the experience I was informed this attitude is quite general in poorer districts of New York. Children are being taught to resent charitable overtures. My informant explained it was part of Communistic propaganda that is more deep rooted in such areas than elsewhere in the city.

Paul Whiteman and Vincent Lopez have negro valets who practically run their private lives. Each of the band men is inclined to stoutness and his diet is carefully supervised. Their valets know to whom they will talk on the phone and other intimate details of their lives. But what appeals to me most about the valets is their names. Paul's is Uss and Vincent's is Elmer.

League Court Illusions

Some Americans may hope for non-political decisions now and then from the so-called World Court of the League of Nations, but Europe knows better.

Such is the conclusion of the Chicago Tribune, expressed recently in an editorial discussing the pro-French decision handed down by the Court, by eight votes to seven, in the Austro-German Anschluss dispute.

The Tribune said:

"The division of the Court PERFECTLY REPRESENTS THE POLITICAL CLEAVAGE OF EUROPE, the majority opinion dominated by the French policy of restraining the restoration of German influence, and the minority opinion by the governments disposed to assist it within reasonable bounds.

"This is a disclosure, while it causes no surprise in Europe, which should be helpful in the United States, where our adherence to the Court has been urged on the ground that it is an independent and disinterested judicial body which is to be depended upon to establish and develop a system of international law based upon and governed by judicial science and free from the influence of nationalist interests and policies.

"NO SUCH ILLUSION EXISTS IN EUROPE IN RESPONSIBLE QUARTERS."

Picking on U. S.

James W. Hook of President Hoover's Commission on Unemployment suggests to the New England Council that the war debts among the Nations ought to be cancelled, to relieve the depression.

The United States happens to be the only creditor Nation. That is, she is the only one which has paid her bills, owes nobody and is owed by all of them.

So, it is another way of saying that Uncle Sam ought to foot the entire bill, paying for the extravagance, laziness and war-like ambitions of Europe, in the hope of putting the world on its feet again.

These members of the President's Commission, instead of dabbling into international politics, which they are illy equipped to discuss, ought to confine their efforts to the task for which they were presumably appointed—of finding work for American citizens.

More Driving Perils

Auto deaths and accidents attain their highest records in the three last months of the year, the season we are now approaching.

A carpet of leaves, damp with dew underneath, is as dangerous as ice on a mountain road.

Dusk steals upon the rider. The twilight is short. He opens the throttle and races along, hoping to reach his destination ere early darkness sets in.

Visibility is poorer. His windshield is dampened. He closes the car windows to shut out the Fall touch of cold.

All these conditions induce accidents. Records plainly show the auto is used more in Summer but the greatest accident rate is in the months of Fall and early Winter.

Let us, therefore, drive with exceeding care.

We would not want one of our own children killed.

Why risk the life of some other child.

Airing the Subway

Peter Witt, Cleveland railway expert, denounced the Boston subways as "stink pots."

He said they were natural breeding places of communicable diseases, inimical to the public health.

Improvement has been made in sanitation and tunnel construction since that time, and the car-riders of Boston are entitled ALWAYS AND EVER to have the fullest advantage of them.

The cars are over-crowded in the rush hours, as they will continue to be on a railway obliged to transport in excess of 500,000 commuters daily.

Just Folks

Rabbits

Janet has a pair of rabbits just as white as winter's snow
Which she begged of me to purchase just a week or two ago,
She found the man who raised them and she took me over there
To show me all his bunnies, at a dollar for a pair,
And she pleaded to possess them, so I looked at her and said:
"Will you promise every morning to make sure that they are fed?"
She promised she would love them and she promised she would ===
They had lettuce leaves to nibble and were cared for tenderly.
And she looked at me astounded when I said: "I should regret
Buying pretty bunnies for you if to feed them you'd forget.
Once there was a little fellow, just about as old as you,
Who forgot to feed the rabbits which he'd owned a week or two."
"He forgot to feed his rabbits!" said my Janet in dismay.
"Yes," I said, "as I remember, he'd go scampering off to play,
And his mother or his daddy later on would go to see
If his pretty little bunnies had been cared for properly,
And they'd shake their heads in sorrow and remark it seems too bad,
That rabbits should belong to such a thoughtless little lad."
"Who was the boy?" she asked me, and the truth to her I told,
"A little boy you've never seen who now is gray and old,
Some folks say you're just like him," but she'd looken at me and said:
"I won't forget my bunnies! I'll make sure that they are fed!"
And she bravely kept her promise for about a week or two,
But today I fed the rabbits, as I knew I'd have to do.
